Probe Cause of Plane Crash in Which Ten Died

New Stratoliner in 10,000-Foot Plunge in Washington State

Alder, Wash. —(AP)— Aviation experts came to this mountain village today to seek an explanation for the crash of the new four-motored Boeing stratoliner which carried 10 occupants to death in a spectacular 10,000-foot plunge Saturday.

Victims of the crash included A. G. Von Baumhauer, aeronautics engineer for the Netherlands government; Peter Guilonard, assistant manager of the Royal Dutch Air Lines, and several prominent American airmen.

Presence of Von Baumhauer and Guilonard in Seattle had not been generally known. Von Baumhauer was a member of the Dutch air mission to the United States. Guilonard came on private business.

Federal and Boeing officials studied the twisted wreckage of the $500,000 ship to determine whether a structural fault was responsible. Thomas Hardin, Washington, D. C., vice chairman of the air safety board of the civil aeronautics authority, directed the federal investigation, while R. J. Minshall, vice president and assistant general manager of the Boeing Aircraft company, headed the builder's examiners.

Won't Guess Cause

Neither would hazard an opinion as to the cause of the accident, which stripped the Boeing company of some of its key men, including Test Pilots Earl Ferguson, 31, Julius Barr, and William Doyle, all of Seattle.

Other victims were Harlan Hull, 32, Kansas City, Mo., chief test pilot for the Transcontinental and Western Airlines; John Kylstra, Seattle, Boeing chief engineer; Ralph L. Cram, 33, Seattle, Boeing aerodynamics expert; Benjamin J. Pearson, 32, Seattle, assistant Boeing sales manager; and Harry T. West, Jr., 36, Seattle, Boeing foreman.

Minshall said he was confident investigation would "disclose neither the plane nor the flying personnel was in any way at fault." He said he had some "pretty definite ideas" about what happened but declined to elaborate.

In Series Of Tests

The stratoliner, designed to carry 33 passengers and a crew of five on high altitude flights, had been undergoing a series of tests preparatory to applying for a federal license.

Thirty-five minutes after taking off from Seattle it was a mass of wreckage on a logged off hill about 55 miles to the south.

Frank Caldwell, chief of the civil aeronautics authority's inspection service, and Phil C. Salzman, air safety investigator, who arrived here yesterday from Chicago, made an extensive examination of the wreckage to determine if breaking of a motor mounting caused the crash.

One motor fell clear of the plane itself and lay buried two feet in the ground, several hundred feet from the main part of the wreckage. Eye-witnesses said the motor dropped from the plane before the ship itself began to disintegrate under the terrific force of its fall.

No Need to Raise 45 Billion Limit On National Debt issued under the authority of that act, and certificates of indebtedness issued under the authority of Section 6 of the First Liberty Bond act, shall not exceed in the aggregate $45,000,000,000 outstanding at any one time and provides further that the face amount of bonds issued within that limitation shall not exceed in the aggregate $30,000,000,000 outstanding at any one time.

"'At the present time the treasury can issue approximately $5,000,000,000 face amount of additional public debt obligations under the Second Liberty Bond act. On the basis of the current budget estimates this balance will be sufficient to carry the treasury well into 1940. I do not believe, therefore, that it is necessary to request at this time an increase in the limitation on the total debt that may be issued and outstanding under authority of the Second Liberty Bond act, as amended.

"'The limitation of $30,000,000,000 on outstanding bonds presents, however, a different problem. The amount of bonds which the treasury can issue within this limitation, after taking into consideration the March 15 refunding operations, is approximately $1,800,000,000. Taking into consideration our cash requirements between now and Jan. 1, 1940, the monthly issuance of United States savings bonds, and the possible refunding operations which the treasury may wish to conduct, it seems quite apparent that the balance of $1,800,000,000 will not be sufficient to give the treasury that latitude required in its financial operations over the next few months.

"'In order that the treasury may be in a position to take advantage of favorable market conditions and not be forced to confine all of its financing operations to short-term obligations, I strongly urge that a recommendation be made to the congress that the limitation of $30,000,000,000 on bonds be eliminated entirely so as to give the treasury the flexibility it needs for its financing operations during the next fiscal year.'"

Scout Leaders Will Map District Drive

The Appleton district boy scout campaign will be mapped at a meeting of scout leaders following a 6 o'clock dinner Tuesday night at the Copper Kettle.

William E. Buchanan, chairman of the council finance committee, and F. N. Belanger, executive board member, will meet with about 20 leaders to make preparations for the drive. The date of the campaign has been tentatively set at April 29, Walter Dixon, executive, said today.

Armory G Teems With Activity as Booths are Built

Prepare Displays for Fifth Annual Housing and Home Show

Armory G was a busy place today as work started on the construction of booths for the fifth annual Better Housing and Home Show to be sponsored by the Knights of Pythias.

About 46 booths will be set up for the show that opens Wednesday evening and continues through Sunday night. More than 5,000 people are expected to attend.

Either through coincidence or remarkable foresight on the part of the Knights of Columbus, sponsors of the event, the show is timed perfectly with the first overtures of spring, the season when building buds with the trees. Sunday and today brought unmistakable signs that winter is retreating as warm sunshine and blue skies gladdened those weary of snow and ice.

The Better Housing and Home Show can properly be regarded as the first formal sign of spring, for the building of new homes and the remodeling of present ones get the starting signal at this time of year.

Sponsors of the show have predicted that it will help give building in Appleton and vicinity a head start by offering people a timely glimpse at what 1939 offers in building materials, supplies, and equipment for the home.

The basement of the armory will be given over to games. Entertainment will be presented periodically during the show. The doors will open Wednesday night. The show will run Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, Saturday and Sunday afternoons and evenings.

Hi-Y Club Leaders to Talk Over Activities

Leaders of Hi-Y clubs will meet following a 6 o'clock dinner at the Hearthstone this evening. Discussion of Hi-Y club activities will be held. About 10 men are expected, C. C. Bailey, "Y" boys director, said today.

HITLER RETURNS TO RECEIVE CONQUEROR'S HOMAGE

Lithuania and Germany Agree On Memel Fate

had been ordered "to return to Berlin to report."

French Ambassador Robert Coulondre, called back Saturday by his government, already had left the German capital.

Circumstantial evidence indicated that the reunion of Memel with greater Germany is only a question of days.

(Memel, a Baltic district 1,099 square miles in area, was detached from Germany by the Versailles treaty and later placed under Lithuania sovereignty with a measure of autonomy.)

With Chancellor Hitler back in his world-watched chancellery and the press hinting at a possible cancellation of the 1935 British-German naval treaty in reply to Britain's stiff protest over the nazi absorption of Czechoslovakia last week, this train of facts showed how the wind was blowing:

Absorption Held Certain

1. German newspaper editors told their foreign colleagues privately that the absorption of Memel was practically assured.

2. Various travelers reaching Berlin from the northeast of Europe reported troop movements.

3. A meeting of the Memel landtag or diet, scheduled for March 25, is regarded in political circles as pivotal in Memel's future history.

4. The discussion between Von Ribbentrop and Urbsys was said also to have touched upon the question of Lithuania's role in the European concert of nations.

It was denied vigorously in responsible quarters that anything like a protectorate over Lithuania was intended.

Responsible circles indicated that Memel was one of the chief topics under discussion last night at a conference of Hitler with various trusted lieutenants.

Relations With Britain

It also was admitted that the precarious state of relations with Great Britain was likewise a major topic.

Whether Germany actually would abrogate the 1935 naval agreement with Britain could not be learned. Informed German editors, however, predicted that Germany would take up the race in naval armaments as soon as practicable, at the same time bending every ounce of energy toward keeping up the strength of the air arm.

Maintaining the air strength would be considered easy, because Germany obtained an excellent collection of airplanes from Czechoslovakia.

For the immediate future, government spokesmen intimated, German propaganda will be turned upon an alleged effort at London to hinder negotiations between Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, German economic expert, and the Rumanian government for a trade agreement.

Reichstag Not Called

Reports that Hitler intends soon to summon the reichstag were dispelled when it was announced that Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering intends to resume tomorrow night his "holiday" on the Italian Riviera and at points further south. He was summoned by the chancellor from the "vacation" just before the entrance of German troops into Moravia-Bohemia.

When he came back then from Italy, official commentators said that he had "by no means been resting, but had been at work." The remark seemed to indicate that the renewed "holiday" would include a report to Premier Mussolini on the new central European situation and on Germany's attitude toward Italian aspirations concerning French colonial territory.

Village Collects 98 Per Cent of Tax Bill

Waupaca—L. J. Stadler, Waupaca county treasurer, thinks the village of Scandinavia merits a gold star for it paid 98 per cent of its $5,138.62 tax bill, according to the report of Miss Daisy Buer, village treasurer, filed this morning.

The report, the first to be received, showed a total collection of $5,247.56 with three of five delinquents asking time extensions to July 1. The total assessed valuation of the village is $267,343 and the tax rate is $20 per $1,000.

with the department of commerce in bankruptcy studies for three years.

He married Mildred M Riddle of La Grange, Ore., in 1923. They have two children.

Other Appointees

Other Roosevelt appointments to the supreme court have been:

Senator Hugh L. Black of Alabama, whose nomination led to a prolonged public controversy over his one-time membership in the Ku Klux Klan.

Solicitor General Stanley Reed of Kentucky.

Felix Frankfurter, Harvard law school professor.

As soon as a new justice takes his seat, the court can proceed with arguments on three cases held up because of an eight-judge court during most of the present term. The litigation involves:

1. The right of Kansas and Kentucky to ratify, after once rejecting, the pending constitutional amendment to abolish child labor.

2. A government request to defer distribution of $586,000 to commission men at the Kansas City Stock yards until Secretary of Agriculture Wallace can pass anew on the reasonableness of charges they made from 1933 to 1937.

Auto Seizure vase

The court has ruled that a previous order by Wallace denied the commission men a fair hearing.

3. The right of the federal government to seize an automobile at Greenville, S. C., under the federal liquor laws.

The nomination of Douglas was announced while he was in a closed meeting of the securities commission.

If the nomination is confirmed and Douglas leaves the commission, officials said, George C. Matthews, senior member of the commission, probably would be temporary chairman.

Some suggested, however, that Commissioner Jerome Frank, one-time AAA counsel, might be named acting chairman, instead.

Selection of a permanent chairman, it was said reliably, will be postponed until after President Roosevelt appoints a successor to Douglas. No appointment is expected, however, for a few months.

Firemen Answer Two Alarms Early Sunday

Firemen answered two alarms early Sunday morning. They were called to the Emil Daniels home, 501 W. Winnebago streets, at 12:10 to put out a chimney fire. A rubbish fire in the back yard at the Phi Delta Theta fraternity home, 424 E. North street, was extinguished at 12:45 Sunday morning.

Garner Affirms Political Views Expressed in '32

Vice President Says His Opinions are Same as They Were 7 Years Ago

Washington —(AP)— Vice President Garner, it was learned today, is answering inquiries about his stand on governmental policies by citing a statement of views he made in 1932. He says he now holds the same opinions.

The 1932 statement was contained in a letter accepting the Democratic vice presidential nomination. Foregoing the usual notification ceremony, Garner wrote Senator Barkley (D-Ky.) his philosophy on government.

"There are just two things to this government as I see it," the letter said. "The first is to safeguard the lives and properties of our people; the second is to insure that each of us has a chance to work out his destiny according to his talents.

Protection For All

"This involves protecting him from being injured or oppressed by those of superior acquisitiveness, and perhaps less conscience, who seek to strain the rules to their own advantage.

"In my opinion, nearly all of our civic troubles are the consequence of government's departure from its legitimate functions. Our increased population and new conditions arising from new inventions often make it necessary to change the rules in order to keep the balance between the people and those who would exploit them.

"Unfortunately, these changes and adjustments result too often in enchancing instead of diminishing the evils."

During the present administration, Garner sometimes has been reported in disagreement with policies advanced by President Roosevelt. But, still standing on his 1932 declaration, the vice president thus describes Mr. Roosevelt as a "leader of ability, resourcefulness and determination" with a "sympathetic grasp of human problems. . . . courage in meeting emergencies and overcoming obstacles."

Fond du Lac Youth Is Facing Murder Trial in Colorado

near Akron, Colo. The youth denied he shot the man, Silgen said.

The body of Gray, shot to death, was found near Akron March 11, and his car was located in Denver March 12.

Wisconsin F. B. I. experts reported the bullet found in Gray's skull had been fired from a .25 caliber pistol taken from Medberry at Denver. Medberry was arrested at Denver on a concealed weapon charge and then released.

Silgen said Medberry told him after leaving Denver he hitch-hiked to Chicago, sharing the driving with the owner. He was arrested early Saturday at the home of his bride of less than a year.

HAS COURT RECORD

Oshkosh—A check of the municipal court records in Oshkosh today revealed that Ellsworth Medberry, Fond du Lac, charged with murder of John T. Gray, Colorado Springs, Colo., was arraigned in Winnebago municipal court in January, 1938, on a charge of embezzlement.

Medberry at that time served as an officer in the Neenah-Menasha Trades council and a complaint filed against him a year ago charged him with embezzling $181.50 of the Trade council's funds.

He was arraigned January 31, 1938, and served several days in the county jail after he failed to file a $300 bond.

On Feb. 7, 1938, he was scheduled to make a plea to the information filed by District Attorney Lewis C. Magnusen but the attorney informed the court that restitution had been made and asked dismissal. Judge S. J. Luchsinger dismissed the defendant after court costs were paid.

Nine Departments of Mill Without Accident in 1938

Kimberly — Nine departments of the Kimberly mill operated through 1938 without a lost-time accident. The work in some of the departments listed is among the most dangerous in the mill. The departments are: wood room, sulphite, Groundwood, chlorine, electric, power generation, research, statistical and office.

The wood room has a crew working outside in all kinds of weather. They encounter rain, snow, sleet, cold and heat and through it all must supply the mill with wood. Unloading of the cars on the log haul is one of the most hazardous jobs in the mill. The inside crew in the wood room must handle this cold icy wood, for at all time the wood is slippery. For protection against this, 90 per cent of the men in the wood room wear safety shoes.

During a breakdown the operating crews turn to repair work. The wood room does practically all of its maintenance work.

The probability of being gassed, smothered in a chip bin, falling into a blow pit, and many other hazards are encountered by employes of the sulphite many times each day. Life belts are used to enter the blow pit shanties and chip bins. Each member of the digester crews has his gas mask which he keeps handy at all times. The jobs are dangerous, but the precautions taken result in a safe record.

The groundwood crew handles cords of slippery wood, each stick likely to be the cause of an accident.

The most dangerous material in the Kimberly mill is handled by the chlorine department—Chlorine gas and liquid caustic.

The electric and power generation departments must continue steadily. A millwright or carpenter may make a mistake and receive a small injury while an electrician who makes a mistake by seizing a charged wire, may not live to tell about it.

Gallons of acids are handled by the research department annually. Mixing these acids must be done carefully to avoid accidents.

Chamber Nominees Will be Selected

Committee Meets Tomorrow to Draw Up List Of 10 Candidates

Candidates for positions as directors of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce will be selected at a meeting of the naminating committee at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon, Kenneth H. Corbett, secretary, said today.

John H. Neller is chairman of the committee which will name 10 candidates for the five positions open on the chamber board at the annual election this spring.

Other members of the committee are Heber H. Pelkey, R. J. White, Alfred C. Bosser, and Carl Holstrom. Board members whose terms expire this spring are R. H. Purdy, A. H. Wickesberg, Daniel P. Steinberg, Sr., Karl Haugen, and R. H. Marston.

Purdy is now president of the chamber. After the committee nominates the candidates, the new board members will be elected at the anual meeting which will be held next month. The board will then name the new officers. The date for the annual meeting has not been determined.

The Past President's club, a new sub-division of the Appleton Rotary club, will present the program at the luncheon tomorrow noon in the Conway hotel.

Five past presidents of the Rotary club will speak at the luncheon, each for about five minutes.

Dates of Cooperative Events Will be Named

A committee from the retail division of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce will meet at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in the office of Kenneth H. Corbett, secretary, to set dates for cooperative retail events during the next 12 months.

Wayne Jones is chairman of the committee. Other members are Edward Nadel, William Petersen, Karl Haugen, and Ray Eichelberger.

TOWNSEND TO MEET

The Townsend club will meet at 8 o'clock Tuesday night at the Outagamie county courthouse. The meeting has been changed from Thursday to Tuesday.

SPECIALISTS SAVE TIRES WORN SMOOTH

Putting new Hawkinson treads on a tire is a matter of minutes, says Ray Plamann, tire specialist. Part of the process is pictured above, he is inspecting a finished Hawkinson Tread job, now ready to deliver new-tire mileage again.

Hawkinson Treads Offer Big Savings to Motorists

It's Like Putting New Soles on Good Shoes, Declares Ray Plamann, of Rays General Tire Co.

"Fifty Million Frenchmen Can't Be Wrong," says the old song.

"And we don't believe that 5,000 tire owners can be wrong either," says Ray Plamann, exclusive Hawkinson treading system agent in Outagamie county.

"We are tire specialists," says Mr. Plamann, "and we know that in the Hawkinson patented treading system we are saving motorists thousands of dollars annually.

"The Hawkinson system should not be confused with retreading. We don't retread tires. No rubber is removed. The tire is not baked. We simply vulcanize rubber to rubber and produce a brand new tread that often outwears the original tread.

"It is very much like putting new soles on a pair of shoes," Mr. Plaman went on.

"If the uppers are good, new soles will make a new pair of shoes for you. So, we say, if the tire carcass is in good shape, Hawkinson treads will give you new tires.

Our System Is Simple

"Tire makers say that 75 per cent of tire investment is in the carcass. Twenty-five per cent is in the tread. If the carcass can be saved with a new tread at small cost, certainly the saving is great."

The Hawkinson system, developed by Paul Hawkinson of Minneapolis some 10 years ago, is extremely simple.

First, the tire is given a rigid inspection to see there are no breaks in the sidewalls. If the tire is in good shape, the smooth running surface is roughened on a buffer, but the original form is not in any way impaired by cutting or paring.

The tread stock is then placed on a spreader, the sidewalls drawn apart and a hoop or curing band placed around the running surface. The tire is then mounted with an ordinary tube and rim and placed on the curing stand. Here it is cured in a natural running position, the process taking about an hour and a half.

Two Advantages

"Hawkinson treading has two distinct advantages: First, the new rubber is vulcanized to the rubber, and not the fabric of the tire. Secondly, the tire is vulcanized with the crown held flat. When it is inflated the rubber is under tension. As the tread strikes the road it is again flattened and contracts to a neutral position. The result is a remarkable road-gripping power and increased mileage."

He emphasized that no heat gets to the inside of the tire during the process. There is no scorching, and no chance to destroy the strength of the cotton.

"Seventy-five per cent of the western Pennsylvania companies using large fleets of cars are using the Hawkinson tread system. When auto owners wake up to the savings they could be having they'll be amazed. After treading 1500 tires last year, we feel that we should know."

Experienced Tire Men

In 1925 Mr. Plamann started with General Tires when they were sold by the Stanton Tire Shop. He has specialized on tire vulcanizing and repairing since that time in the same location, 130 N. Morrison St., Appleton, on May 1st, 1937, purchased the tire business from the Zelie Motor Co.

He is well equipped to handle and guarantee vulcanizing and repairs on truck, passenger, or tractor tires of all sizes. With this well known line of General Tires and unusual repair facilities you are assured a better tire and better service. Come in, investigate this combination, and judge for yourself.

Federal Agencies Foreclosing More In 1938 Than '36

Figures Bear Out Complaints of Stiffened Policies

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison — Complaints of Wisconsin farm leaders and rural legislators recently against the stiffened foreclosure policies of federal farm lending agencies were corroborated today with a report from Gordon Gunderson, director of the Wisconsin home and farm credit administration, a state agency, that Wisconsin federal farm foreclosures in 1938 were three times as many as the foreclosures in 1936, two years earlier.

The federal land bank and the land bank commissioner foreclosed 1,723 farm mortgages in Wisconsin in 1938, compared with only 542 in 1936, it was shown.

The foreclosures were particularly heavy in the far northern counties, and in the central and northeastern sections.

Marinette county farm foreclosures, for example, jumped from 5 in 1936 to 39 last year; there were 6 in Oconto in 1936, 38 last year, 5 in Shawano two years ago, and 73 last year. Even Waupaca county's ratio of foreclosures increased substantially, from 1 in 1936, to 21 in 1938.

Show Decrease

Moreover, at the same time the foreclosures effected by private mortgage holders, banks, insurance companies, and individual lenders decreased, from 1,798 in Wisconsin in 1936 to 1,596 last year.

Significantly, another federal lending agency, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, also showed a slackening in the foreclosure rate in 1938 over 1936. The HOLC in 1936 foreclosed on 2,503 homes, contrasted with only 1,233 in 1938. Private agencies' foreclosures on city property, however, increased during the period, from 1313 to 1820.

The home and farm credit administration said that there were 6,372 foreclosures effected on rural and urban property by federal and private lenders in Wisconsin in 1938. Following are the numbers for each of the counties in the Appleton area, for both farm and city:

Outagamie	88
Calumet	15

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

The Eastern Push

Pasadena, Calif.

Finding myself on the Pacific Coast, the information available is insufficient to make any adequate estimate of the immediate course of events in central Europe. It is, of course, a question whether sufficient information exists anywhere about Hitler's immediate plans and his present objectives.

For it has been his method, hitherto, to strike suddenly and to push on, feeling out the resistance in his way, and to pause at the point where there is sufficient resistance to bring him face to face with the risk of war. It has been demonstrated again and again that Hitler's actions are not limited either by his pledges to other governments or by his own principles, as for example the racial principle that he does not want alien Slavs in the German Reich. The one rule which he has followed consistently is to subjugate without pity those who cannot or will not resist him but always to make his conquests without becoming involved in war. He attacks the weak and the irresolute. The strong and the brave he does not attack. It may be presumed, therefore, that even now he has not decided how far he will go, that he will keep going until he meets somewhere a serious resistance.

Limit Of Campaign To Be Fixed In East

It is fairly clear, it seems to me, that the limits of the present campaign will not be fixed in London and Paris but in Moscow, Bucharest, Belgrade, Budapest and Warsaw. For Great Britain and France do not possess the military power to intervene in central and eastern Europe. Their power to intervene was fatally impaired when they assented to the militarization of the Rhineland in 1936, when they failed to keep pace with German armaments from 1935 to 1938, and finally when they surrendered Czechoslovakia at Munich.

The primary resistance now can come, one may suppose, only from some of the small central European nations and ultimately from Russia. Whether there is among these peoples any capacity or will to resist remains to be seen. Russia is an unknown quantity. But it is probably safest to assume that Russia's strength, such as it is, can begin to be effective only if Russia is actually invaded. One might expect, therefore, that the eastern frontiers of Hitler's new empire will be established in this season at the point where Russia is capable of fighting. That point might be in central Europe; it may be somewhere inside the Russian territory. Until that point of resistance is reached, it is unlikely that the Western powers can or will intervent in the development of events.

From View Of Nazis Hitler Plan Is Right

There are indications, it seems to me, that this campaign marks another victory of the radical Nazis over the more conservative and cautious Nazis. It is known that there has existed all winter a conflict in the Nazi party between those who wished to consolidate the results of Munich by more or less peaceable measures, and those who insisted that outright military conquest of the Pan-German Empire was the only solution. Hitler, who is himself a radical Nazi, has, it is evident, chosen the violent military solution of Germany's problem.

And from the Nazi point of view he is probably right. He is probably right, that is to say, in thinking that Nazism is incapable of making progress by peaceable means; it is too greatly feared in all countries, too greatly hated everywhere, to accomplish anything except by intimidation and overpowering force. The exploitation of eastern Europe is not possible by normal commercial methods; if this region is to furnish the supplies that Germany needs, they must under this regime be taken by military requisition, by outright plunder and looting. A regime which is incapable of winning friends must conquer what it wants.

Hitler is probably right, also, in thinking that a policy of appeasement would undermine him, that if ever he agreed to let Germans negotiate amicably with their neighbors, there would be set in motion within Germany forces that would eventually displace the real Nazis.

England Must Continue To Increase Armaments

It is difficult to imagine how Hitler's choice of military conquest leaves open any choice to the British as to whether they will devote themselves with a single-minded purpose to the developing of their maximum military power. Unless they take measures which expand their own power in proportion to Hitler's expanding power, they will surely encourage, in fact invite, the formation of an aggressive alliance between Germany, Italy and Japan against the vital centers of the British Empire.

Weakness, irresolution, division and the complacent illusion that since Hitler is moving to the east, it is safe for the Western nations to relax and feel secure—these are the things which would most surely transform the present crisis into a general catastrophe.

BACKS HUNCH

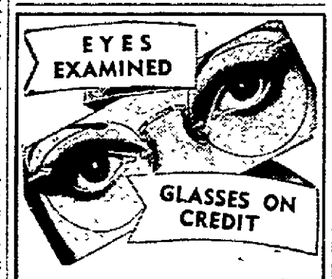

Amarillo, Tex.—(AP)—Since pioneer days amateur weather prophets of the Texas Panhandle had a favorite rule that a steady southeast wind for three days brought rain.

"And it's a good rule," says H. T. Collman, U. S. weather observer at Amarillo.

"If a wind blows for three days from the southeast it brings moisture from the Gulf of Mexico and when the moisture reaches the cool air over the Panhandle it condenses and we have rain."

Precautions Prevent General Epidemic of Flu at New London

New London—While many New London school children and adults have been kept home for several days with mild attacks of influenza during the last two weeks, precautionary measures have prevented a general epidemic in the community according to Miss Loretta Rice, school nurse. Schools in surrounding towns and villages have been forced to close at one time or another while absences from New London schools have not been sufficiently great at any one time to interrupt classes. In a tour of all grades and schools last week, Miss Rice advised pupils and teachers of symptoms and urged all to remain home at the least signs of the sickness.

H. H. Helms, superintendent of schools, Mrs. F. J. Pfeifer and Miss Rice attended a meeting of the Waupaca county Anti-Tuberculosis committee at the Hotel Marson at Clintonville Friday night.

Pittman's Statement May be Taken as White House Words

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Even more significant than the statement of condemnation issued by this government upon Hitler's crushing of Czechoslovakia were the words of Senator Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee.

"We must not delay in preparation for potential and physical action," said Senator Pittman.

Raymond Clapper

Time and again Senator Pittman has uttered the words which the White House, for reasons of state, was not free to speak, and this utterance should be accepted by the country as one of those occasions. I feel confident that it is what Roosevelt himself would like to say and that he is anxious to have this warning of the gravity of the situation conveyed to the country. As a good many in Washington know, nothing yet published adequately expresses the intensity of Roosevelt's personal feeling about Hitler. Not all that he said to the senate military affairs committee in that now historic secret meeting has been published.

Roosevelt, I am certain, regards Hitler as the Number I menace to the kind of world we know. He has no faith whatever in the man.

I think it is the conviction within the administration that when England and France decide the time has come to act, it will be necessary for the United States to throw its material resources in. Roosevelt will not, while he is president, sit idly by and see England and France want for supplies from the United States. If the neutrality act is not fixed to permit such action, it will be fixed. Roosevelt will muster all the strength he can command to clear the path so that help can be given, and my guess is that he will have congress overwhelmingly with him when the showdown comes.

Up Until Now Hitler Had Some Justification

Up to now, as Chamberlain said in his memorable Birmingham speech, there has been some justification for the things Hitler has done. If we didn't like the way he operated, a great many people recognized some justice in his demands, his reoccupation of the Rhineland, his annexation of Austria, and even his absorption of the Sudeten portion of Czechoslovakia. England and France had ignored his demands and he gained his ends by force. There was something to be said in Hitler's behalf up until this week. Chamberlain was patient. God, how patient! If ever a man tried to find a peaceable solution for Hitler's very real problems, if ever a statesman tried to go more than halfway to find a peaceful solution that would help Hitler, it was Chamberlain.

Now Hitler has betrayed all of that. He has broken all his promises and perpetrated the rape of a small independent country which was tending to its own business and which couldn't possibly be a menace to Germany. Without consulting Chamberlain, as he had promised to do, Hitler marched in and seized the country, threw his yoke around its people, snatched their gold, and inflicted his brutalitarian code upon them.

Hitler Crime Heads List For This Century

Of all the crimes in this black century, this of Hitler's must head the list. An outrage without a shred of extenuation to veil its treacherous infamy.

German citizens could reasonably have approved of much that Hitler has done. It is difficult to see how they can, at heart, feel other than shame over this last needless, disgraceful act.

On Jan. 4 Roosevelt said: "There are many methods short of war, but stronger and more effective than mere words, of bringing home to aggressor nations the aggregate sentiments of our own people."

I don't think the events of this week have caused him to change his mind.

Peace Conference Is Suggested as Way to Avert War

United States Could Act As Mediator, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—War in Europe, or else bigger and bigger armaments to scare off Hitler and draw Mussolini away from his ally, very much as the Italians threw into the discard the famous triple alliance which before 1914 joined them to Germany and the Austro - Hungarian empire—these are almost the only contingencies spoken of here as possible sequels to the seizure of Czecho - Slovakia and her gold. Is there another way?

Lawrence

There are other alternatives, which, but for the political influence of "isolationists" in the United States, would now be engaging the attention of the world. The trouble which Europe has faced since the ill-fated Versailles treaty has been to no small extent the outgrowth of the greed and selfishness of Great Britain and France in their absolute refusal to treat the German republic fairly and justly, loading impossible reparations on the backs of the German people and keeping the country in a state of economic subjection by exhausting demands for cash and raw materials as punitive payment for the war.

The colonies which were wrested from Germany in Africa and elsewhere were put by the Versailles treaty under "mandates" which were supposed to be a sort of "trusteeship" and were not to constitute a permanent annexation of territory to the countries appointed as trustees Faced by economic strengulation and a debasement of their monetary system, the German people were persuaded to believe that, by abandoning their republic and accepting nazism. They would be liberated from economic adversity. Today, they support the nazi rulers because there is no certainty that the allied nations would treat them any more fairly now or after the next war than they did in 1919.

Allied Policies

While nobody here condones for a moment the nazi measures, it would be misrepresenting the state of opinion in Washington to say that our officials regard the allied policies of the last 20 years as truly contributory to a permanent peace. Recollection has not departed concerning the sad experience which President Wilson had in dealing with the allied statesmen at Paris when he attempted to secure acceptance of the famous "fourteen points" that he had assured the German people would be the basis of peace.

What is needed today is a second peace conference, to undo the wrongs imposed by the Versailles treaty and to assure economic stability for Europe by the removal of the trade barriers, without which action, as Mr. Wilson foresaw, there could be no lasting opportunity for the smaller countries to survive even though granted political independence.

The ony instrumentality sufficiently disinterested in the world which can act as mediator today and summon the nations to a second peace conference is the United States government. If Mr. Wilson were alive today and head of the government he would not hesitate to mobilize by radio and the press the public opinion of the world back of a concerted effort of all peoples to prevent war, and he would perceive that the real way to prevent war is to recognize the sources of friction and boldly seek to remove them.

Balances of Power

Were President Roosevelt to adopt this course, he would face, in America, a strong faction which would regard this as "meddling" and would denounce it as a means of entangling themselves. This "isolationist" group succeeded in wrecking the league of nations by keeping America from joining it, even though, in 1920, the Republican party contained a large number of prominent men who insisted in public declarations that a vote for Harding meant a vote for the league with reservations. After Mr. Harding was elected, the Republican leadership took the position that the people had repudiated the league, reservations and all. Premier Poincare, believing that America had withdrawn her moral support and every possibility of furnishing any aid to Europe in solving her troubles, promptly set about to recreate a system of military alliances.

Policy of Mediation

The question of which course will eventually drag America into war—an active policy of mediation with an attempt to bring moral force to bear by showing the German people a program that will tempt them to abandon nazi rule, or a passive policy of drifting and waiting for a world war in which Canada on the north and the Latin-American states on the south would inevitably get us entangled is an open one at the moment. Either course has its dangers and risks, but it may well be asked whether a genuine effort to bring justice to bear in Europe by a second peace conference, with economic opportunity and financial aid definitely in the picture, as a concrete program for peace is not after all worth the effort as a means of preventing another adventure in "organized murder," as Lloyd George called the last war.

Lawrence College Needs Over Half Million Dollars a Year to Pay Its Operating Expenses

Some idea of the magnitude of Lawrence college as a business institution will be gained from this fourth article in the series describing the college and its work. This article discusses the business administration of the school, the next will describe its academic administration.

BY VIOLA HELLERMAN

Although it is known primarily for its educational work, Lawrence college is also a large business undertaking involving daily expenditures of approximately $1,450 for 365 days of the year. It employs as a custodian of its funds a business manager who incurs obligations for current expenses and disburses funds in discharge of them, who disburses student loan funds with the approval of the president and assumes responsibility for their collection and who presents to the trustees at the close of each fiscal year a complete report of the financial transactions of the college for the previous year.

The operation of the college in 1937-38 involved expenditures totaling $529,000, of which a little more than half, 57.3 per cent, was paid by the students themselves in fees.

Business administration of Lawrence college, which spends over a half million dollars a year for salaries, supplies and maintenance, requires a sizable staff, under the direction of Ralph J. Watts, business manager of the school, shown at his desk, in the upper picture. At the bottom is a birdseye view of a part of the business office, with Spencer Johnson, a student from Mayville, Wis., transacting a bit of business with Miss Victoria Sinner, the cashier.

Instruction, of course, is the main expense, as a college is built on the ability of its faculty.

How It's Spent

Each dollar of that $529,000 was distributed as follows:

Administration and general	20.9 cents
Instruction	61.1 cents
Plant operation and maintenance	12.1 cents
Infirmary	1.7 cents
Students Aid	2.0 cents
Other Expense	2.2 cents

This money is provided as follows:

Students fees (including conservatory)	57.3 cents
Income from endowment and plant assets	22.4 cents
Gifts	15.7 cents
Other Sources	4.6 cents

The trust funds of the college amounts to approximately $1,500,000. Due to decline in interest rates, the income from this endowment is considerably less than that of a decade ago. The inventory of the buildings and grounds of the college shows a valuation of approximately $2,000,000.

Oldest building on the campus is Main hall, which was constructed in 1859. At that time it was the largest public building in Wisconsin, and it is still used as the main recitation building. The newest bulding is Alexander gymnasium, located on the south campus. It was completed in 1929 at a cost, including land, of nearly $400,000.

Owns 65 Acres

The college owns approximately 65 acres of land, including the main campus, the athletic field and other land south of the Fox river.

Lawrence college is administered under a charter granted in 1847 when Wisconsin was still a territory. The charter was granted by the legislature of that territory to "Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin," and this charter, with subsequent amendments, is the one under which the college is still administered.

The charter provided for the management of the college by a self-perpetuating board of trustees. The number of this board is now 36, 12 of whom are elected annually for a period of 3 years. Two of these twelve are always chosen from alumni who are nominated by the graduates of the college.

This board holds regular meetings twice a year and special meetings as conditions warrant. Its officers are a president, two vice presidents, a secretary, treasurer, business manager and executive secretary.

Nine Committees

There are nine standing committees of the board, the more important of which are the executive committee which meets monthly and represents the board between its meetings; the committee on endowment and finance which is responsible for obtaining gifts for the institution for its endowment or for buildings or for a deficit when such occurs; the committee on investments which is responsible for investing and reinvesting the endowment funds of the college; and the committee on buildings and grounds which considers plans for new buildings and major alterations of existing buildings.

Representative of the board of trustees in the faculty and of the faculty in the board of trustees, the president of the college is its chief administrative officer. He recommends to the trustees candidates for positions on the faculty and supervises the work of all academic departments.

Another important cog in the administration of the institution is the treasurer of the college, who is elected from the board of trustees. He is the custodian of the trust funds and securities, and with the cooperation of the investment committee is responsible for the investment policy of the college.

Custodian of Funds

The business manager, mentioned earlier in this article, is the custodian of the funds available for current expenses. Under the direction of the executive committee and in accordance with the budget he incurs obligations for current expenses and disburses funds in discharge of the same. He is the custodian of the plant assets of the college and all personal property and is responsible for their safe keeping and use.

He is also responsible for the maintenance of books and records of account of current funds, plant funds and trust funds, and at the close of each fiscal year he prepares and presents to the trustees a complete report of the financial transactions of the college for the previous year. Ralph J. Watts is present business manager of the college. He has been on the staff since 1926.

The budget for operating expenses of the college is prepared by the president and business manager and is presented to the trustees and approved by them.

RECEIVING with a home set: Mrs. Dorothy Temple, who runs a home, has a job too. She is enjoying a cigarette —a Camel—for, like so many women, she finds a delicate fragrance in Camels that is very appealing. "Camels taste so good," she says. "They do have a wonderful mildness."

THE SMILE OF ANTICIPATION: Dick finds a moment to enjoy a Camel. "Camels are different," he says, "mild, full-flavored. I smoke all I want, and they never jangle my nerves."

"After catching questions and answers on the fly, hour after hour, believe me, it feels good to let up—light up a Camel. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'" Camels have the rich, ripe flavor of finer, milder tobaccos. You'll find those choice tobaccos do make a difference!

AMERICA'S DEADLIEST FOE TODAY

People within traveling distance of middle Europe look fearsomely upon the horizon for the appearance of war's dark and angry clouds.

But the studied effort to transfer to these shores the same terror is purposely designed to quit our eyes from staring at the bitterest enemy we have.

We may devote billions to "protecting" ourselves from foes who never could get here but the real reason way down deep with those who fathered this idea is to stop the sunken eyes of the jobless and destitute from reading over again the promises of plenty so solemnly sworn or perusing once more the wretched plans that have been proffered and the shameful lack of ability evidenced or anything else excepting the flare to go on a spy hunt for Tories and stage other Roman Colosseum games and stunts similar to those with which Augustus Caesar deluded the mobs nearly 2,000 years ago.

Men who have had virtually dictatorial control of this great country, of its 14 billions in gold bullion, of its 50 billions of bank deposits, of every bureau and instrumentality created under the law, and have made such signal failures, accomplished, except for the first year in office, such a complete and utter washout, should not crown their careers of blunder with the infamy of war in order to escape or defer the just wrath of a slowly awakening people.

Every spot in Appleton where there is a possible chance of employment is familiar with today's tragedy. And it is a tragedy worse than any in Europe. It is the tragedy of last year's high school graduates and the graduates of other years, still trying to get jobs. It is the tragedy of fine young men and women wandering the streets, cursed by that devil's creation called idleness, finding themselves useless, their muscles and minds growing soft and inert, but losing something much more precious than a material thing, losing faith, hope, respect, and being marred, perhaps forever, in that treasure of the human body, the spirit.

We are sick and tired of the alibis, ballyhoo, baloney, the cheap excuses, posings before the public mirrors, bowings and scrapings before the Reds, the Pinks and the lunatic Lavenders.

Isn't the country yet finished with farm programs upon which we spend billions only to find conditions in many respects worse than when we started? When will the people tire of the gabbers, the loose-lipped, the strutters and the spoiled children of indolence posing as statesmen?

How do men who want work expect to get a job when every financial industrial sheet indicates that the government is taking away from industry the money with which it could employ other men, extend its facilities, improve its property or strike out upon new ventures? How can Appleton prosper by sending great and unnecessary gobs of wealth to Washington to receive in return a small fraction spent in keeping its poor idle?

And when will farmers see the light clearly from a government that, to repeat merely one of the numerous orders recently sent to our desk by a farm bureau, urges that payments made the farmers in order to get them to cut down produce be spent for fertilizer to improve productivity of the soil and more seed to produce more crops?

We have heard about the prizefighter who entered the ring without an opponent and knocked himself out. We thought it was a joke, just a Munchausen comedy story. But it is our nation in action today.

America has one supreme menace striking at its vitals today. That menace is not war. But war may be employed to obscure or hide the real, livid and leering menace. We only wish the people generally could view it and understand it as do the men to whom applications for work are made so constantly in every plant in town. To view America's manhood crumbling and womanhood in despair dragged along behind this chariot of purple, chortling politicians, bruised, bleeding, hungry and weary is to view democracy at its very worst.

But the people who are aloof from a sight of this problem, who do not come in touch with it, can never know the poignant stabs that come to those who are part of it every day. "I have looked everywhere for a job." "I have answered every ad but there were 200 ahead of me." "Give me any sort of job, I must work. My parents have done wonderfully by me but their pantry is thin, what in the world am I going to do?"

And the answer is go carry a rifle in Europe.

We shall see whether the great fortunes we have spent on schools and education amount to anything, the fact that half our real estate taxes in many towns go for the support of educational institutions. For now we will see whether the people can stay on the track or whether honeyed voices trying to hide black failure can lead them astray again, even to their suicide.

QUO VADIS, EUROPE?

The French premier has been given dictatorial powers for nine more months. The request coming in an atmosphere shot by lightning flashes could hardly fail.

But affairs on the continent do not make the request necessary. It is necessitated by the havoc wrought in French industry by the Popular Front which has done more to debilitate France than Germany was able to do in four years of warfare.

Democracies are always between fires. One danger is from the dictatorships. Another is from their groups of visionaries. It is sometimes a question which does the more harm.

Hitler has so dwarfed Mussolini since last September that the Roman Caesar will have to do something or surrender the title of Caesar to the German. The friendship between Caesars has always been superficial to the point of invisibility.

Eliminating the personal equation and the necessity of keeping the fires of pride blazing and ignoring such little affairs as Memel, the German city that was attached to Lithuania, and the Polish Corridor that was inserted to divide East Prussia from the Reich, the German Caesar is expected to next move against Russia by taking the Ukraine, thus satisfying a beautiful political grudge and filling the German granaries with grain at the same time. When one can accomplish satisfaction of personal or spiritual demands and material or bodily ones at the same time he obtains the thrill of applause and the warmth of a full belly which, together, create a pleasant situation.

Meanwhile Moscow is trembling. Frantically it is searching the books for courteous words so that it may talk in friendly fashion to the German ruler. But it has been an old precept of Bolshevism that only aristocrats used nice language and that to remain a common man gutteral words were more seemly. An opponent is always a swine. Contesting a policy, Moscow invariably speaks about hitting someone on the snout. When the sty is the standard illustrations are naturally drawn for it.

But Stalin may give Hitler considerable difficulty by preventing him from filling the Ukraine up with his agents so as to foment a revolutionary movement for independence. Hitler whose mind runs in a single rut, prefers the role of Liberator and in order to pose continually on that pedestal he cuffs his hand to ear for the piteous cries of the distressed before he signals his army to move onward.

If we only permitted bookies to take bets in Wisconsin interest should be aroused over what Russia will do when Germany is prepared to take over the Ukraine.

The betting should be about even that she will lie down. Memories of the Mazurian lakes still linger, of that German army that licked an army five times its size, the best army that Russia could put forward.

But in the meantime the Italian Caesar is looking for a barren island to grab as justification for another parade. And our American Caesar is preparing his notes of protest. Even if his advice isn't asked he gives it freely to all. Having made America over and placed everyone comfortably at work he will now reach out and settle Europe.

THE CICADAS ARE COMING BACK

The cicada, known as the seventeen year locust, will be back again this year. In 1922 the nymphs were hatched and holed in. Now they are ready to desert their underground chambers and bore their way out. That is their fate. Otherwise it would be a case of very poor judgment. The world hasn't much to offer to anything which had the opportunity to avoid it by remaining oblivious.

When these cicades were here in 1922 Howard Carter had found the stairs leading to the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the glories of whose burial were about to be revealed to the curious people of all nations. King Tut was a little known Pharaoh of almost recordless life whose existence on the earth was only a few months longer than the buried period of the locust which came out the same year with him. Locusts and Egypt are closely associated in the minds of Bible trained people. The two phenomena supplemented each other. Both made a great stir.

The year 1921, one of uncomfortable intimations, had a slogan. It "would reward fighters." The next year, the year of Tut and the locusts, seemed to prove it. Here in the United States at least the new era was just ahead. It wasn't going "to rain no more." But in Europe the Germans were starting the printing press money which was to reach astronimical stabilization at 420 milliards to the dollar and the French were preparing to invade the Ruhr. It was going to rain some more. The rain makers were bringing on the refuge out of which sticks here a nos and there a pallid hand.

Our new era disappeared into the New Deal and the fighters who refused to allow the backwash of war get them down in 1921 have found the roads by which the country has made its way out of depressions before closed by the governmental barricades. The cicadas will come back after seventeen years to a world which hasn't much to show in flattery of either its instincts or intelligence. Some of them, however, will have an almost human experience. In trying to come up they'll hit a concrete street or a basement floor laid while they were down below. They may think that's tough luck. They won't know the half of it. That's where most of the humans are.—The Chicago Tribune.

—DALE HARRISON'S— In Old New York

New York—It is called Doodling. When a person uses a pencil absent mindedly while talking over the telephone or conversing vis-a-vis, he qualifies as a True Disciple of Doodling.

All great men, and practically all other kinds, doodle. Each doodler has a distinct technique. Gene Tunney, the banker who rode that famous bicycle race in Chicago with Jack Dempsey, marks off dozens of triangles during the course of a three-minute phone conversation.

George Bernard Shaw draws squares with the initials "GBS" inside them. Noel Coward, a frequent New Yorker, moves his pencil back and forth in a single line until the paper wears through, then starts another line.

Kay Kyser, the North Carolinian whose dance band has made a sensational rise in New York in the last year, jots down musical notes. The telephone pad in the apartment of Dick Todd, the singer, is black with dollar $$$ signs. (This was especially interesting to me because I have the same habit, except that I sometimes alternate between $$$ and the figure 8. My own explanation of it is that there is an unconscious tendency to move the pencil in curves—the motions required to make a dollar sign and an 8 being about the same).

Frank Buck, who brings things back alive, draws pictures of lion's heads. Sam Goldwyn scribbles his signature, but always tears up the paper afterwards.

Milt Herth, virtuoso of swing on the electric organ, prints out the letters of the alphabet. If the conversation is long, he goes back over the letters, blocking each of them. Herbert Hoover's penchant for drawing intricate designs is well known.

And Adolf Hitler, someone was saying just the other day, pencils very nice skull-and-crossbones.

Eleanor Holm, whose name is down in the future books to marry Billy Rose, doesn't stint herself when getting a new bathing suit. The suit she wore in a recent Radio City Music Hall appearance cost more than $200, a figure that made it one of the costliest bathing suits in the world. It consisted entirely of rhinestones on net. Miss Holm, who set many swimming records and is to head the water show at the Fair, designed the dress herself.

It is Charles Mitchell of Shreveport, La., who called attention to the fact that in a recent paragraph on the popularity of nickel-in-the-slot phonographs the name of one of the most popular artists was omitted: Jimmie Davis. Mr. Mitchell, steel guitarist on the Davis records, calls attention to Davis' "Nobody's Darlin' But Mine" and "When It's Roundup Time in Heaven" as among recordings which have been very popular among platter players.

Besides writing and singing songs, Jimmie Davis is Police Commissioner of Shreveport.

This Is New York:

Chinatown is still down around Mott and Pell, but the midtown district is getting more and more Chinese. On West 49th Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, there are 12 Chinese restaurants—and there aren't that many in a single block anywhere in Chinatown.

A 12-year-old boy in a family I know left the following note which his mother found when she arose on Ash Wednesday morning: "Dear Mama: Please do not wake me up today. I am giving up school for Lent."

As proof that New Yorkers rarely see the wonders of their own town, Dick Todd, the Canadian singer, went down to see the Aquarium the second day he got in town, and in perusing the pages of the Aquarium Guest Book—250 names to a page—he had to turn back 16 pages before finding the name and address of a New Yorker. Forty-seven pages further back he found the second New Yorker.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

WHEN I LOOK BACK

When I look back across our mingled years,
I know it is not all the joys we shared
That made our lives one pattern. . . . By the tears
We shed together, and rough seas we fared;
By every disappointment we have faced;
By failure and by fault, we two have come
To a high point of understanding based Upon the sorrows of a little home.

Young love is beautiful to contemplate,
But old love is the finished tapestry,
Stretching from oaken doors to Heaven's gate,
Woven on earth for all eternity,
The threads made stronger by the steady beat
Of hearts that suffered torment and defeat.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — The president is having trouble again, and no wonder. Half the troubles of the country arise from mistrust and misunderstandings generated by words and phrases that some people understand one way and others a different way, and some that people don't understand at all.

Grover

Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which handles tax matters, joined the president in urging the press to find a substitute for the word "appeasement" as representing the administration's new policy toward business.

The word appeasement came into general use after Prime Minister Chamberlain explained what had happened at Munich. The democracies had to "appease" the totalitarian nations to keep from having a fight.

'Who's Afraid Of—?'

Well, said Harrison, coming from the White House, if anybody wants to get in the president's chair let him continue to use the phrase "appeasement of business" as representing Mr. Roosevelt's attitude. Maybe it is appeasement but it isn't the kind that comes from being "scared," as were England and France at Munich. Or at least it won't do any good to carry on the idea that the president is so scared that he is going to give business everything it wants. That is what Harrison intimated.

The president promised to go to his theasurus to find a better word and told the press to "go thou and do likewise." Anyway, he said, the press invented the word, not the president.

Well, there are others having word trouble. Jerome Frank, Securities and Exchange commissioner, said that certain words stirred up bad associations and prevented clear thinking. So he invented a trio of new ones and said others could be designed.

He was discussing monopoly. Monopoly, he said, sounds like a crime, but certain monopolistic systems are socially desirable, notably telephone and water systems. To such monopolies he applied the name Ugwug.

In turn, he said regulation of industry often seemed to mean excessive governmental intervention or regimentation. Yet some regulation is highly desirable. He calls it Agwag.

Again, he said, when business men got together among themselves, or with labor, buyers, and producers, or any two or more of the list got together, it was immediately interpreted as a conspiracy to fix prices and rob the ultimate consumer. But at times such consultation is highly desirable, and to the "good consultation" as distinguished from "conspiracies in restraint of trade," he gave the name of Wifwaff.

Some Other Possibilities

They were splendid words, but even Frank could not tell which meant which after he had once used them.

Off hand we can think of a half dozen words that could use a bit of revising. The word "purge" used in Germany to extinguish opposition by use of the axe, was employed here during the last political campaign and beclouded the issue handsomely.

And yet, the New Dealers who suffered from employment of the word "purge" have no true complaint coming. Early in the New Deal, liberals who have happened to differ with New Deal methods were arbitrarily damned as "conservative tories."

In the eyes of some discontented conservatives, every New Dealer is a "communist."

Such usage makes good headlines but plays havoc with sensible understanding.

* * * WELL I'LL TELL YOU * * *

By Bob Burns

Hollywood—So you thought you'd heard the last of football till the fall of 1939? Well, not exactly! One of the most terrific games ever played took place jes' the other day. Big Ed Escilonos, Colgate star, with frenzied fans cheerin' him on, smashed over the goal line — an' busted his arm. It's a wonder he didn't bust his head. He made his touchdown by divin' out of an upper bunk in his fraternity house in his sleep!

"What a game!" says Ed. "I never played so hard in my life! Next time, though, I'm gonna play my dream games in a lower bunk. One more touchdown like I made last night is liable to ruin me!"

My Aunt Trude—she's an old maid—an' she dreams a lot. One night she dreamed a man said somethin' fresh to her an' she sat up in bed an' slapped his face. Boy, she packs a mean wallop! It knocked the bed post lopsided an' busted three of her fingers. The news got around town an' there ain't been a man who's dared to pass more'n the time of day with her since!

AFRICANS FIGHT NAZISM

Johannesburg —(AP)— Resolutions urging a fight against Nazism in South Africa have been set out in the preliminary agenda for the South African Trades and Labor Council's National Executive Committee Conference at Kimberley from April 10 to April 14.

AND AFTER THAT'S DIGESTED

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — The Republicans' rally at the capital tomorrow will be behind closed doors, reporters have been informed by Dr. L. F. Gullickson, which isn't unnatural at all after hearing what some of the Republicans have been talking about lately.

Wyngaard

At the last state meeting of the Republican party, held in Madison during the inaugural festivities in January, newspapers carried extensive accounts of the proceedings, including the accusations of some local leaders that the party big-wigs didn't give a proper accounting of the money spent during the fall campaign, and the threat of one of the aggrieved bigwigs to strike one of the bolder local captains in the nose.

Probably Dr. Gullickson is afraid that more talk like that will come at the meeting tomorrow. More likely, however, is the probability of criticism of Julius Heil by some of the up-state Republican gentlemen who have been getting more and more querulous.

Whatever is the reason for barring the public from the session, Dr. Gullickson is inviting a lot of random speculation on what transpires there, and an accentuation of the gossip already plentiful, that Heil and the party aren't getting along together as well as they might.

PROGRESSIVE CHAIRMAN

The Progressive state central committee will meet soon to elect a new party chairman.

The meeting will be held before Phil LaFollette returns to Wisconsin, announces Senator George Hampel, vice chairman and acting head of the organization.

Suggested candidates for the place are few, but it may be worth noticing that E. M. Rowlands, former chairman who resigned to run for reelection to the state senate last fall, is back in Madison. Rowlands was supposed to have taken a job in Washington, but he told friends here last week that he preferred to "be on the local scene."

The chairmanship is now vacant because of the resignation of John W. Reynolds of Green Bay, who gave as one of the reasons for his retirement last December the fact that he held a civil service job prosecuting Indian claims in the attorney general's department. The legislature, however, is now taking that excuse away from him by abolishing the position, one which paid $300 a month.

PENSION COMPROMISE

Senator Allan J. Busby of West Allis (former Outagamie county educator), who was scorned and heckled a few weeks ago by the $60 pension people for his advocacy of a $40 plan, wears a smile these days. The $60 folk are talking of compromising. P. J. Zisch, leader of the higher pension movement, is discussing the idea of accepting less, while A. J. Balzer, legislative champion of pensions, says that $45 is better than nothing."

NEW BUDGET

Finance committee members now admit that Governor Heil's budget will be entirely rewritten, that a new budget bill will be submitted to the houses, probably about the middle of April.

How the budget is growing may be shown by the revelation that in one recent afternoon the committee approved raises totaling $800,000 above the Heil figures.

Finance Chairman Otto Mueller of Wausau, when questioned by reporters on the budget, volunteers to prepare a statement asking for suggestions from the public "on how we're going to raise more money."

ANALYSIS OF CHARM

Speaking of the cultivation of the cigarette and cocktail affectations by young women, and the sad effect these social dissipations have upon feminine charm, we may well inquire what constitutes charm?

The first step in analysis is to dig into trusty ol' Webster here—for years I kept Web standing right at my elbow for quick service, but an efficiency expert studied my plant and promoted Webster to a raised throne directly back of my typewriter where I may consult him by barely raising an eyebrow—and I fear Webster missed the essential point in composing a definition. True enough, charm is that which attracts, bewitches, fascinates, allures, captivates, delights, enchants, commands admiration, love, or submission. But there is something else that is essential in the real thing (not the make-believe or affected manners, expression and speech modelled in Hollywood) and that something is vite. Vite was coined, if you remember, from two words, "it" and "vitability."

There come to mind here the words a mother used in describing the effects of the iodin ration upon her 11 year old daughter who had been suffering from "a kind of chronic fatigue or lassitude" and a pensive, sober disposition. She was so tired and gloomy that she could not enjoy life as young people should. The result of a few weeks on the iodin ration was "simply unbelievable. She is starting her college course this week and she is very happy . . . she is bubbling over most of the time. . . ."

That's it—bubbling over—blessed with better than average nutritional condition — resiliency — pep—vite.

Charm is natural, unconscious. It is not confined to the feminine sex nor even to human beings. A puppy, a kitten, a colt, a fawn, a fox, a bull, a bear may have it. Children generally have charm, but, oh, how soon most of them lose it in these unhygienic times. Some young men have it but few have the grace to hang on to it thru the salad years.

Of course, education, culture, breeding, training, character and personality or temperament or disposition contribute more or less to charm, but unquestionably vite is the paramount component. Courtesy of manners, modulation of voice, enunciation, culture, dress, even intellectuality may be counterfeited well enough to deceive the unsophisticated for a time or until under stress of emotion the actor lapses into his real self. Vite defies imitation, fortunately.

It is unfortunate for the well being and happiness of the race that so many individuals of limited intelligence are content with burlesque caricatures of health. Bedaubing themselves with grotesque makeup that startles even the casual beholder or resorting to tricks of attire calculated to conceal physical weaknesses or shortcomings, they lack a normal or healthy interest in the ways and means of cultivating health and vite; stumbling along in their tawdry world of make-believe they neglect or gloss over various insidious derangements of health which are susceptible of correction if recognized and treated early but which develop into disabling or deforming disease if long ignored.

Being Secretary to Governor May Sound Like Bed of Roses But Heil Aids Don't Find It So

(Post-Crescent Madison Bureau)

Madison—Members of the executime office secretariat, four out of five of whom assumed their jobs less than three months ago without any previous political or governmental experience, report that the novelty of their positions has worn off and that they have settled into the routine of helping Governor Julius P. Heil run the state government.

The men who might be called the governor's "brain trust", the group of former business associates whom he has chosen as his advisers, are finding that there is more to do in the executive office than appears on the outside. The governor gets a lot of mail, they have found, and particularly a new governor and a governor who represents a party which has been out of power for almost a decade. Mail must be answered.

A governor gets a lot of callers, and many callers who want tangible results, such as appointment to a state job, and particularly a new governor who represents a party which has been out of power for a long time. Callers must be seen, and job-seekers appeased.

Governor Often Absent

A governor gets a lot of requests for public appearances, and especially a governor who is new to the office and who represents a party which has been out of power for years. So the governor is frequently absent, which makes the secretaries' work harder, or there are frequent demands for pinch-hitters, which also means extra work for the secretaries.

And a governor is subjected to the visits of an exceptionally large number of gentlemen and ladies who are known by politicians privately as "cranks", persons with elaborate plans for the salvation or reformation of society, panaceas for wars, depressions, and the ills of the human race in general. If Governor Heil were to see all the people who want to see him, he would spend 12 hours a day without touching a pen to state papers, or without paying any attention to state business. His time must be conserved, and that's where his secretaries come in again.

So the five men who are "assistant governors" have their hands filled.

Personal Secretary

No. 2 man in the governor's office is William C. Maas of Milwaukee, whose business career was spent in the fuel line in Milwaukee. Tall, broad chested and big voiced, he most frequently represents the governor when the latter is unable to fill reqests for engagements to speak. He is Heil's personal secretary; through him and past him must file all those who see the chief executive. Necessarily his desk is the limit which many of the executive callers reach.

Probably more important in an advisory capacity is quiet, husky voiced Charles McKeown, who used to run a country club in Milwaukee before his friend was elected governor.

McKeown is the man on whom Heil leans for information and guidance in financial affairs. He sat beside him all during budget hearings, took notes while the governor himself just listened and talked. The budget — and no one is secretive about it—is McKeown's creation.

Financial Trouble-Shooter

The middle-aged, iron-gray man with the Scotch name and German accent serves Heil as the astute Thomas N. Duncan served Heil's predecessor, Philip F. LaFollette, as financial trouble-shooter. His job is particularly hard because of the parlous condition in which the Republican administration found the state treasury.

For the last few weeks he has been combing the records and experiences of other states for tax tips. Recently he surprised a group of realistic newspaper editors by his fluent command of taxes and taxation problems, his mastery of facts and figures on various kinds of taxes which have been considered by the Heil people as ways out of their fiscal dilemna.

Legal adviser is white-thatched, pleasant Elmer Barlow, who practices law in Arcadia in northwestern Wisconsin, and who is making his appearance in the capitol and state capitol politics for the first time. Legal counsel are generally hired by governors for the duration of the legislature. It is their job to tell the executive what bills contain, so that the governor may sign or veto them.

Assumes Other Duties

Barlow, however, has assumed other duties. He handles many of the affairs of the emergency board, particularly as they pertain to relief and pensions to the harassed northern Wisconsin counties.

Less clearly defined is the position of August Frey, one of Heil's principal campaign assistants last fall. Officially he is purchasing counsel, and is directly charged with supervising the work of the state bureau of purchases, which spends in the neighborhood of $10,000,000 a year for supplies, materials and other things used by the state and its many departments. Since his appointment, however, he has also taken charge of examining state highway contracts, which must be approved by the governor, and sundry other affairs which require the governor's signature.

Thus far, too, Frey has been busy, as have other secretaries, in handling the deluge of letters and communications from persons who feel that they have enough stake in the Republican party to get a state job. He also receives many of the governor's friends — and Mr. Heil has a surprising number of personal acquaintances in all walks — when the governor is absent.

5th Secretarial Aid

A fifth secretarial aid, who might be classed as the office's liaison man with the legislature is Arthur A. Tiller, former newspaperman who knows state politics as few others know it. Tiller has the formal function of every other gubernatorial press agent, to keep his boss in the good graces of the newspapers, but he has another, to keep "the old man" informed of the legislature's doing and thinking. Here McKeown also helps out, especially in budgetary and tax matters.

These are the men who are helping the new governor of Wisconsin govern, helping him take care of callers who earlier numbered up to 100 daily, of letters and telegrams which still average several hundred a week, and recently went as high as 2,000 a week.

46 Influenza Cases Reported During Week

Of the 65 cases of communicable diseases reported in Outagamie county during the week ended March 11, 46 were influenza, according to a report of the state board of health received at the office of Miss Marie Klein, county nurse. Towns reporting cases of the disease are Black Creek town 10, Black Creek village 8, Freedom 10, Greenville 1, Hortonia 1, Hortonville 10, Oneida 2 and Seymour city 4.

Appleton reported two cases of chicken pox and one each of mumps, scarlet fever and whooping cough. The town of Black Creek reported a case of pneumonia, Grand Chute a case of mumps, Deer Creek four cases of small pox, Hortonville four cases of whooping cough, Kaukauna a case of scarlet fever, Oneida a case of scarlet fever and the city of Seymour a case of scarlet fever.

Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont are said to be the only three states in the union without poisonous snakes.

Would Lift Cattle Trade Obstacles

Legislators are Concerned Over Barriers to Interstate Trade

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau

Washington—Congressman Harry W. Griswold, West Salem Republican and Congressman Merlin Hull, Black River Falls Progressive, are planning to introduce a bill to remove state trade barriers against cattle.

Both the Republican and the Progressive are deeply concerned over the existing barriers to interstate trade. Congressman Hull tried in vain to get congress to investigate the milk monopoly in the district of Columbia, which is keeping out milk from the western states.

Congressman Griswold inspired the bill recently introduced by Senator Alexander Wiley, Chippewa Falls Republican, which would set up a senate committee to investigate state barriers in all branches of commerce. Griswold did not advise the senator to introduce such a bill, because, he says, "We don't need an investigation. The facts are all here. What we need is legislation to correct this condition."

Congressman Joshua L. Johns, Algoma Republican, also conferred with Senator Wiley, his luncheon guest last Sunday, on the subject of trade barriers.

Congressman Johns campaigned against Wisconsin's tax on oleomargerine, he says, explaining that, while the tax appeared at first to aid the farmers, it has in reality destroyed their southern market for butter, and cost the state government thousands of dollars.

Congressman Johns will speak on trade barriers when the subject next comes up for discussion in the house, as he and others are sure it will.

Be A Careful Driver

County Would Get $46,000 More If Highway Aid Bill Is Passed

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Sponsors of a highway aid bill now before the legislature which would increase state road assistance to local governments by $2,600,000 annually today prepared an analysis of the proposed program showing its import to towns, villages, cities and counties in Wisconsin.

The break-down showed clearly why the members of the state assembly a few weeks ago aprovepd the bill by an over whelming majority, despite the fact that there were strong hints that it might embarass the Republican administration which may be forced to use highway revenues for regular state governmental purposes.

The bill gives counties an additional $940,000 in aids for county trunks on a milcage basis, and a flat $500,000 besides; it would give cities an additional $310,000, villages more than $24,000, and towns $890,000.

Introduce Substitute

The measure has the ardent support of the Wisconsin County Boards association, but the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, representing city and village governments, is not completely satisfied with the proposed shares for cities. It has introduced a substitute which would treat cities more generously.

After its passage with ease in the assembly, the senate highways committee, headed by Senator Mike Mack, administration senator from Shiocton, recommended it for passage. It was referred to the finance committee, however, where it will probably remain for a considerable period while the financially worried administration legislators devise a revenue scheme to balance the budget.

According to the breakdown presented today, the bill would give the following additional amounts in highway aids to the towns, cities, villages, and counties in the Appleton area:

Outagamie	$46,464
Brown	45,974
Calumet	17,796
Manitowoc	38,390
Shawano	42,783
Waupaca	38,151
Winnebago	45,014

Reserved Seats for Senior Class Play on Sale Tuesday

RESERVED seats for "The Romances of Emma," the 3-act comedy which Appleton High school seniors will present Friday evening in the new auditorium, will be placed on sale Tuesday at Bellings Drug store. The performance is scheduled to start at 8:15 Friday evening, according to Miss Ruth McKennan, director.

Bus service to the high school will be continued 7:50 Friday evening, before the performance and will be resumed again after the performance.

"The Romances of Emma", a dramatic adaption of Jane Austen's "Emma," by DeWitt Bodeen, is the amusing story of a young girl who openly professes a propensity for match-making. It is not until her schemes begin to affect her own heart that Emma relinquishes this favorite amusement.

A comedy of manners, the play presents in a detached, even slightly ironical spirit, a picture of country society during the days of the Regency in England. Undisturbed by the larger issues of her time, Jane Austen was content to record the sentiments, foibles, the maxims, of the provincial society which she knew so well.

Jane Austen's life was nearly over before the literary circles of her day took notice of her. A contemporary of Sir Walter Scott and the other members of that romantic generation, she had a gift for reality that set her apart from her literary colleagues. Ordinary people doing ordinary things gave her the material for her novels, which she presented without affectation or apology.

Emma Woodhouse, the heroine, is a conventional young girl, "handsome, clever and rich, with a comfortable home and happy disposition," and Highbury, her home, is a conventional community. Since, however, she is something of a busybody, Emma thinks she can manipulate affairs in her own circle. But Emma's world, Jane Austen makes clear, has been established before she came into it. After repeated misunderstandings, Emma finds herself content to mind her own business and settles down as the wife of a substanial, unexciting, worthy man.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

In keeping with the spirit of the affair, the decorations were inelegant, the walls of the fraternity house being covered with burlap and newspaper comic pages. Arrangements for the party were made by Stanley Cole, Wausau, social chairman of the fraternity.

March Is Good Time to Start Building New Bird Shelters

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Most of us can remember the time when bird houses, except those for purple martins, were a rarity but now you can't go very far in cities, small towns and farming communities without running across bird homes occupied by a great variety of species.

Clara Hussong

The United States Biological Survey has made a study of the various kinds of birds which will occupy man-made nesting boxes or supporting devices built for them. They find that 48 species of birds have been known to use these bird homes, and the types of birds range from bluebirds to hawks and ducks. The complete list is given in the Farmers' Bulletin 1456, "Homes for Birds," which may be had by writing to the superintendent of Documents, at Washington, D. C. They welcome information concerning any additional species which can be added to this list.

Leaflet on Houses

March is a good time to spend on building new bird houses or repairing and cleaning old ones. They should not, however, be erected until April, for if they are, they will be taken by sparrows and starlings who will fight off the desirable species. Whenever possible bird houses should be taken in for the winter and set up again just before the birds' return in spring.

If they cannot be dismounted easily it is a good plan to keep them covered with canvas or burlap through the winter. Those that are left open are generally used as a shelter through the winter months by starlings and sparrows who do their best to keep the rightful owners from reclaiming the boxes when they return.

The bulletin I mentioned, "Homes for Birds," will give you all the information you need on building bird houses and erection. From the State Conservation Department, at Madison, you can get a leaflet, "Bird Houses," with suggestions on the same subject. Besides picturing different types of bird houses, both of these bulletins give such information as the required floor area for each species of bird, the depth of the cavity, the height of entrance above floor, the diameter of entrance and the height at which the bird house should be placed.

Houses Should Be High

Those who have had experience with nesting birds can often supply additional information not generally known, and often at variance with that given out by publications. The height at which blue bird houses should be placed is given by most authorities at from five to 10 feet above ground, but from five to six feet is the best height, according to those who have had experience in attracting bluebirds to their yards.

The thing to remember is that birds are more attracted by favorable surroundings than by the design of the house. Bluebirds like to nest near bushes, but not right in the midst of them. Martins prefer their houses placed 15 to 20 feet above ground in a big open yard, and both martins and tree swallows will show preference to a yard which has electric light or telephone wires running through it on which they can perch.

Robins like bird houses which are built in a porch-like manner, with one or more sides open. These homes can be placed in branches of trees, vines, or sheltered nooks of buildings. If there are cats in the neighborhood, try to find a spot which cannot be reached too easily by these marauders. Cats and equirrels will often keep birds away from an otherwise perfect nesting site.

Paint Preserves Wood

Wood is the best material for building bird homes. Tin or other metal usually becomes too hot in summer. The bird houses can be painted or not, just as you choose. Paint, of course, helps to preserve the wood and if a modest brown, gray or green is used, birds find no objection to the color. Some people claim that birds will not occupy houses freshly painted, but I've had others tell me that this made no difference whatever. To be on the safe side, it is best to let the newly painted house get somewhat weathered before erecting it. Leaving it lie out in the snow and rain for a few weeks will help.

A point which many bird house builders forget is that for some species it is desirable to place a few slates or grooves on the inside for the use of young birds in climbing from the nest to the entrance hole. This is most necessary for those birds who build a low nest but prefer an entrance high up in the structure. Wrens, bluebirds and other birds prefer a small twig or stick nailed just below the entrance hole on the outside, so they can perch on it when feeding their young.

Some birds still prefer their own handiwork for nesting purposes, but they will appreciate any material you can supply. Tufts of cotton or wool, threads, rags and ravelings are good substitutes for such natural materials as plant down, horse hair and plant fibers which are growing more scarce, especially in towns. Straw, excelsior, and similar materials will be pounced upon eagerly for nesting purposes by birds who inhabit towns and cities where the yards are kept free of rubbish.

If you follow directions in constructing and erecting your bird house, and still have no success, try to discover what is wrong with your surroundings, before giving up in despair.

What's New at the Library

With the eyes of the world again turned on Adolf Hitler and Germany, this week's shipment of new books at Appleton Public library arrives at an opportune time for several of them deal with Germany and the situation in central Europe. "Reaching for the Stars" by Nora Wain is an account of the author's four years in Germany from 1934 to 1938 and an attempt to understand the mind of the German people, outside of their nationalistic pride. She made friends in the Rhine valley and Saxony, in the Black Forest, Vienna, Czechoslavakia and Dresden, and within the Nazi barriers she found the warm elements of German character—music, forest walks, happy, healthy children and family life. She could not, however, shut her eyes to the persecution, the desertion of free speech and loyalty to kin, the obedience without mercy which clouded the lives of so many German households. The author was born and raised a Quaker, is a student of Oriental philosophy, was a neutral all through the World war and is married to an Englishman who is deeply interested in music. She lived 13 years in China and then went to Germany with her husband.

G E R Gedye who has been foreign correspondent of the New York Times and the London Daily Telegraph, gives his impression of the events, forces and behind-the-scenes intrigues which made Austria a province of the German Reich and reduced Czechoslovakia to dependent state, in his book, "Betrayal in Central Europe." He tells the grim story of the Czech betrayal, of Austria's gradual decline, the growth of Nazi power in Austria, Dolfuss' tragedy and Schuschnigg's struggle and gallant end.

"Through Embassy Eyes" by Martha Dodd, daughter of William E. Dodd, former United States ambassador to Germany, gives an account of more than four years spent in Nazi Germany through the eyes of a young girl. Her life in Germany was a round of parties, excursions and meetings through which she came to know the circles of diplomacy, generals, newspapermen and the famous and near-famous. As time went on she began to see the real significance of Hitler's Germany, and in her book she tells what happened to herself and her family as well as others there.

The unexpurgated edition of "Mein Kampf" by Adolf Hitler, until now only available in English in condensed form, containing less than half the total text, is now on the shelf of the public library. Considered the best written evidence of the character, mind and spirit of Hitler and his government, the translation has been prepared under the auspices of Dr. Alvin Johnson of the New School for Social Research and has been checked by historians and scholars who have been working on it during the last year.

The United States does not need to go to war, in the opinion of Stuart Chase, and he tells why in his book, "The New Western Front." He tells how the United States differs from Europe and reminds Americans that any foe of the United States has to cross thousands of miles of ocean, and asks the people of this country to look at the reality of our almost immeasurable strength and military security, and to match our supplies with those of other nations.

The widow of the late President Wilson, Edith Bolling Wilson, gives an intimate and personal picture of her life and that of her husband both in the White House and before, in her book, "My Memoir." Part of this material was printed in a weekly magazine under the title, "As I Saw It." Feeling that although much of the matter included here is personal, Mrs. Wilson considers that because of the high office held by her husband it belongs to history, and she relates candidly the events leading up to his declaration of love, her hesitation and finally her realization of her love for him, the tragic days in the White House when the president lay ill and when she was his only confidant. In between roll a succession of events such as the trying reelection period, war days with their excitement and work, visits to the courts of England, Italy and Belgium, and the president's efforts to achieve a lasting peace.

Because Ted Shawn, the dancer, appeared in Appleton twice within recent years, many of the illustrations in the volume, "Shawn the Dancer" by Katherine S. Dreier will be familiar to local people who saw the performances. Essays accompanying the illustrations explain the dance and music of Shawn.

Realization of dreams of "getting away from it all" and going to a tropical island came to Health and Jefferson Bowman who tell of their experience in a book entitled "Crusoe's Island in the Caribbean." Coral strand bordered with palm trees and deep blue ocean lapping white sands became realities instead of visions when this couple left Chicago and went to Tobago, 11 degrees north of the Equator, and there led a full and satisfying life.

"Sensible Dieting" by Dr. William Engel presents the only method of dieting which he considers safe and reasonable, namely, a balanced diet which limits the quantity of fattening foods while it increases that of the non-fattening ones. Dr. Engel has evolved what he calls the vital calories diets, many samples of which comprise over half of this book. There are diets for every meal of the day and every season of the year, together with ideal weight charts and calorie indices.

Waupaca County Sheriff Seeking Two Holdup Men

Believe One of Weyauwega Office Robbers Has Black Eye

Waupaca — With but meager descriptions of the two men who attacked John Wilke with a knife and robbed the Wisconsin Michigan Power company Weyauwega branch office of $295 Saturday afternoon, Sheriff Duncan Campbell and his officers today were continuing their search for the men.

The men slashed Wilke, 21, across the forehead with a knife and locked him in the basement of the building before robbing the office cash drawer and escaping in an automobile.

Wilke said one of the men had been in the store earlier in the week to inquire about the purchase of a motor. He returned to the store Saturday and again asked about the motor. When the clerk stooped to take the serial number of the motor, the man struck him on the head. Wilke, who has done some amateur boxing, was taken by surprise, but struck back, hitting the robber in the face. Wilke believes he gave the man a black eye. The second man then entered the fracas and Wilke was overcome after being slashed with a knife.

Police immediately broadcast descriptions of the men and the search started Saturday afternoon is being continued.

Raymond P. Dohr, district attorney, and Dr. H. E. Ellsworth, coroner, said there would be no inquest after they had investigated the shooting.

Mrs. Meidl was born in Fond du Lac and lived in Appleton the last four years.

The Troop 19 team won against championship teams from Manitowoc, Kettle Moraine, Badger, and Nicolet councils.

Members of the Kimberly team are William Wachentendonk, Donald Verkuilen, Anthony Rooyakkers, Floyd Hopfensperger, and Joseph Van Daalwyk. Clarence Dietzen acts as the patient during competition.

'Anti-Aggression' Agreement Being Sought in Europe

again would be reviewed as one of three British steps in answer to Germany's eastward drive in Europe.

The others were:

1. An attempt to rally "anti-aggressor" nations into a "stop Hitler" bloc.

2. A decision to send a trade mission to Rumania to counter German economic pressure in trade negotiations with Bucharest which have caused widespread concern.

The prime minister made the rearmament announcement after British officials also had stated that the government "may be expected to continue" closest discussions with soviet Russia on Germany's expanding empire.

Chamberlain spoke after an extraordinary cabinet session had decided to communicate immediately with Soviet Russia, Poland, Bulgaria and the Balkan Entente states — Greece, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Turkey.

Authoritative sources, meanwhile, disclosed that both the prime minister and his foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, had been "greatly enheartened" by Washington's condemnation of the German putsch in southeastern Europe and the American reaction generally.

All members of the British government, these sources said, now were convinced that the stand of the United States was one of the first points to be considered in formulating British policy.

Envoy at Confabs

Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky, who has been in contact with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax more frequently than any other diplomat since Saturday, again called at the foreign office for a discussion with Lord Halifax at 3 o'clock p. m. (9 a. m., C. S. T.)

Chamberlain was asked whether in view of Germany's acquisition of Czechoslovakia's war materials, he intended revising Britain's five-year defense program, which started as a £1,500,000,000 ($7,500,000,000) plan and already has been expanded as a result of past crises.

Chamberlain replied in measured tones:

"As I stated in my speech Friday last, every aspect of national defense must now be reviewed in the light of our national safety and this statement, of course, covers the national defense program."

He indicated also that the government might consider banning sale to Germany of British pig and scrap iron, vital to the manufacture of armaments.

Will Submit Text

Chamberlain promised to provide the house with the text of the agreement signed at Berlin March 15 between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Emil Hacha, president of dissolved Czechoslovakia. The agreement placed Bohemia and Moravia within the fuehrer's growing domains as a protectorate of Germany.

"As far as I am aware," Chamberlain said, "no written ultimatum was presented to Dr. Hacha prior to his acceptance of this agreement."

The prime minister told the house of commons that Britain "requires to give full consideration" to the tense European situation in conjunction with other powers "before any statement can be made."

British attention was centered on Chamberlain's message to the house and to a similar statement his foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, was to make to the house of lords.

Replies to Question

Chamberlain made his statement in response to a question by Laborite Arthur Henderson who asked whether Britain would accord de jure recognition of Germany's "annexation and control" of Czechoslovakia.

The prime minister declared Friday night at Birmingham that the German conquest was illegal and Britain has informed Berlin that she regards Germany's new strides in eastern Europe as a violation of the Munich accord of Sept. 29.

As Chamberlain began to speak, roaring cheers arose from the government benches. Crowds gathered before his official residence, No. 10 Downing street, earlier had given him a noisy ovation as he emerged, chewing a cigar and smiling wanly, to go to the house of parliament.

Refugees in Legation

Chamberlain declined to state immediately whether the British legation in Prague would continue to receive diplomatic immunity now that the former Czechoslovak capital was within Germany as part of the nazi protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia.

Henderson pointed out that a "large number of British citizens" had taken refuge in the legation.

Chamberlain also declined immediately to answer questions on the status of the Czechoslovak legation in London.

The cabinet considered the latest reports of its diplomatic and defense experts and the views of the dominion governments, whose London representatives had been urgently summoned by Dominions Secretary Sir Thomas Inskip.

It was believed the dominions had decided to back Chamberlain's government in any move to form a solid front against further aggression in Europe.

Officers at the Portland naval base warned their men to be ready for any emergency in the grave international situation.

Confers With Russian

Britain sounded out Ivan Maisky, soviet ambassador, on the possibility of Russian cooperation with England, France, Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey to stop Adolf Hitler.

United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy also conferred with Lord Halifax. An informed source said Lord Halifax talked to Kennedy about the close diplomatic collaboration.

Armies were again on the move.

Motorized German troops struggled through snowdrifts in Slovakia enroute toward Carpatho-Ukraine, where a narrow Hungarian-held strip separates them from Rumania.

At least 500,000 Rumanians, called from a dozen classes of the army, guarded frontiers of the Rumanian kingdom with its oil and wheat fields.

Troops Massed

Hungarian troops also were massed, causing alarm in British official circles.

British and French officials were said to be looking uneasily toward Italy. Some observers feared Premier Mussolini might try to divert criticism directed at Hitler by raising Italian terrritorial claims against French north African possessions.

Universal conscription rapidly was becoming a political issue in Britain.

Some newspapers demanded it as an inevitable parallel to any new commitments in British policy. Labor party members pledged themselves to resist conscription.

FRENCH ACTION

Paris—(AP)—The French government was reported today to have decided uopn regional mobilization along the Rhineland frontier as a warning to Germany to keep hands off Rumania, a French ally.

Political sources indicated that the first use Premier Daladier would make of the unprecedented dictatorial powers voted him by parliament yesterday would be an armed demonstration to Rumania that she would not have to face German threats alone.

Unusual secrecy surrounded a hastily-called cabinet meeting yesterday, but political observers agreed that the first plenary decrees, submitted for President Albert Lebrun's signature today, would start the recall of troops and would be designed to bring the French army's standing strength up to nearly 1,000,000 men.

French military measures, these sources said, were tied in with a sudden stiffening of the French and British diplomatic policy after nazi Germany absorbed a large part of Czechoslovakia last week. Daladier was reported to have called to the colors 125,000 special fortress troops from the last three classes which have completed their military service. It was also said an additional class of 240,000 men might be summoned.

War ministry officials said the army would be strengthened, but gave no details.

Robert Coulondre, French ambassador to Berlin—who like the British ambassador to Berlin and the German envoy to London—was summoned back "to report," arrived this morning and went immediately to see Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet.

SENTENCES VAGRANT

Judge Thomas H. Ryan in municipal court this morning sentenced Warner Anderson, transient, to 30 days in the county detention camp on a charge of vagrancy. Anderson, who pleaded guilty, was arrested by Kimberly police.

Spring Will Conquer Winter, Take Over Appleton Tomorrow

You won't hear any elfin horns blowing or see a parade on College avenue, but spring prances in to own tomorrow morning.

She's due to get here at 6:29 and the weatherman has been strewing her way with warm winds, sunshine, and blue skies. Tonight will be a bit brisk, but temperatuers will really rise tomorrow, according to predictions.

Water ran thick on street and sidewalks yesterday and today and the frost began to fade from the ground. People of Appleton and vicinity, held fast in winter's fortress for several months, skipped outside yesterday for walks or rode happily about in cars. Baby buggies shook cobwebs out of their spokes and there was the clatter of roller skates on cement.

The thermometer reached 44 degrees at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, according to charts at the Wisconsin Michigan Power company plant. At 1 o'clock this afternoon it stood at 35 degrees, but a brilliant sun made it seem warmer.

Office girls showed up at work wearing lighter-colored clothes this morning. People lingered in the sunlight on the avenue and the patches of bare ground grew larger and more numerous.

Yachtsmen Busy

Had you driven by the Appleton Boat club and Appleton Yacht club yesterday you would have seen Fox river men at work on their boats, preparing them for the general launching that will start about mid-April.

Housewives pondered spring cleaning problems, people began plotting vacation play, there was a shift to lighter-weight coats, and catch basins gurgled at top speed.

Forecaster J. R. Lloyd of Chicago said moderate temperatures in Illois, Indiana, Wisconsin and other north central states would give way to chilly weather tonight but that there would be an uplift tomorrow, the Association Press reported.

By tomorrow afternoon, he said, it should be a full-blown spring day in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas and eastern Nebraska.

Samples of the temperature he expected were 50 in Chicago, 60 in northern Missouri, 65 in southern Missouri and 70 in Kansas.

The only severely cold weather in the nation today, Lloyd said, was in northern Minnesota, where Bemidji reported 2 below zero.

Counties Insist State Pay Share Of Relief Costs

Suggest Study of Sales Tax As Means of Raising Revenue

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—From the public officials who are supposed to be closer to the voter and the taxpayer than any others, members of Wisconsin county boards of supervisors, Governor Julius P. Heil and the Republican state administration during the weekend got some pointed suggestions on policy and a legislative program.

Delegates to the legislative conference of the Wisconsin County Boards association at the end of a two day meeting here declared that:

The state should pay at least half of all direct relief costs of local governments in Wisconsin a program which would cost about $9,000,000 for the balance of Heil's biennium.

The Republican administration should give "searching study" to the possibility of replacing the presently heavy load on general property through the enactment of a sales tax.

Governor Heil and the Republican legislature should appropriate sufficient funds to meet the state's obligations to local governments for school, pension, highway and other aids, and the proposed power of the emergency board to cut all state appropriations and aids up to 25 per cent should be dropped.

Want More Relief

One of the principal problems discussed at the meeting was that of relief, a prime concern to northern Wisconsin county boards.

The association's recommendations for a 50 per cent support of relief costs in all counties contrasts with an appropriation of less than $4,000,000 during the last two years, and proposals now before the legislature to grant $5,000,000 for the two years of the Heil term.

The association also announced the appointment of a new standing committee on relief, headed by Dr. L. D. Eastwold of Spooner, which with state and federal officials will attempt to work out a coordinated relief program with special emphasis on the northern Wisconsin problem. Meetings of the group will begin immediately, spokesmen announced.

The committee's aim is to develop a "constructive program to solve the problem of public welfare and to lessen the high cost," it was said.

While county board members did not suggest a revenue measure to supply the funds for its proposed relief legislation, it was apparent that there is some sales tax sentiment among county board officialdom, particularly in those counties where legal debt and tax limitations are approaching rapidly.

Not Endorsement

In a statement, however, A. J. Thelen, legislative representative and secretary of the association, made it clear that the urgent appeal to the administration to look into the feasibility of the sales tax already enacted in Ohio and other states was not intended to be interpreted as an endorsement of the sales tax.

The power which Governor Heil proposes to bestow upon himself and his two colleagues on the emergency board, to cut appropriations if declining revenues make such a step necessary, would disrupt county finances, the county board members asserted.

Duplicate and Rubber Bridge Are Different

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Although duplicate games and tournaments have grown to enormous proportions in the last few years, there still are a great many players to whom this particular form of bridge is either a complete mystery or at least a trifle obscure. Few realize the difference in the philosophy of the two games, rubber bridge and duplicate. In rubber bridge one's own contract is the paramount issue. In duplicate one must not only ponder ways and means to fulfill one's own contract but must at the same time analyze the hand for what might be occurring at other tables. For example, if a player has reached a three no trump contract and, on inspection of the dummy sees that four hearts or four spades would have been a lay-down, he must not be satisfied to make only nine tricks at no trump. He must go so far as to jeopardize the contract itself in an effort to make an extra trick, so that his 430 or 630 points (according to vulnerability) will outdo the players who selected major suit contracts.

Sometimes, of course, there is no need to jeopardize the contract in order to make an extra trick. Perhaps only good play is needed, as in the following hand:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.

SOUTH

♣ Q J 9 7 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 club	Pass	1 diamond	Pass
2 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding was highly unorthodox, but by no means bad. In fact, it was produced by two nationally known experts. North's one diamond response was chosen as more constructive than a mere club raise and, as will be seen, actually had the value of stopping a diamond lead. South could have bid one heart on the second round, but chose to mask his holding and make the stronger bid of two no trump.

West opened the queen of hearts, the diamond suit having been bid over him. Declarer won and led the queen of clubs. When West showed out (discarding the seven of diamonds) the queen was allowed to ride. East won with the king and returned his fourth best diamond. West's jack was allowed to hold, but a diamond continuation was won with the ace. Now the spade jack was led through East and, when the latter played low, declarer went right up with the ace. A low club to the ace and a club return picked up East's ten spot and declarer cashed his fifth club. West meanwhile had found considerable difficulty in discarding to five rounds of clubs. He had to keep the spade queen guarded and also had to hold the jack and nine of hearts. Thus, after all the clubs were run and declarer was left with the K-10 of spades and the K-10 of hearts, West's holding was the Q-8 of spades and the J-9 of hearts. It was very easy for the declarer to read the situation. He laid down the heart king and threw West in by exiting with the heart ten. West, of course, had to return a spade from the Q-8 to declarer's K-10.

The play on this hand was merely routine for a good player, but the fact that the declarer actually would have risked his contract if it had been necessary to take an extra trick. The moment he saw the dummy his thought was that four hearts undoubtedly would be the usual contract around the room and that, despite the nonbreak in the heart suit, that contract could be fulfilled. Hence a mere three no trump (600 points) would be virtually worthless as against the 620 points that would be scored by those declarers who ended at a four heart contract.

I might also point out that the duck of one diamond was a vital factor in preparing the end position described.

My Neighbor Says—

The between-meal lunch is advisable for underweight or fast-growing children. It may include graham crackers and milk, fruit, simple cookies and fruit juices. In summer, fresh fruits or egg and milk drinks are suitable.

Lilacs are easy to grow, require little or no pruning and usually thrive under most soil conditions. Varieties to grow by the corners of the house are bluish purple and white lilacs. They are most attractive.

Swagger Coats are Popular

Plaid swagger coats are spring fashion news in Paris, New York and Hollywood. Priscilla Lane of the movies follows the trend with one plaided in brown, orange and amber yellow worn casually over a two-piece amber yellow wool frock belted in brown.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane

Psychologist, Northwestern University

Children believe in magic, but so do millions of their parents, who never grow up emotionally. Thus, they evade the laborious but scientific course to success, prefering to hire a fortune teller to predict a glowing account of their future.

CASE M-179: Edith D., aged 23, is troubled by a common dilemma. "My boy friend insists that our lives are guided entirely by the stars," she burst out.

"He says that I am fickle because I was born in the spring. If I had been born in November, he would have married me. Now he has broken our engagement.

"He directs his whole life by astrology. Dr. Crane, is there anything to astrology? And does a person have a chance at success if she is born in the spring?"

DIAGNOSIS:

Perhaps many of you readers will smile in disbelief that serious financial and marital actions are being directed by the tens of thousands of quack character analysts and "bootleg" psychologists in this country.

Maybe you don't believe that in modern, civilized America an educated young man, who graduated from a city high school, would break his engagement to a charming girl, solely on the say-so of an astrologist.

It is estimated that fortune telling has a "take" of $125,000,000 per year in the United States. It is one of the largest rackets. New York City alone pays about $25,000,000 annually to its 20,000 fortune tellers.

Frequently I have taken issue in this column with such quackery as phrenology and physiognomy, numerology, astrology and palmistry because they have no factual basis, and because they are hoodwinking schemes that often destroy homes and happiness.

Beware of "Bootleg" Psychology

Here in Chicago a mother murdered her baby because a fortune teller predicted the infant would grow up to be an imbecile. Several of my patients have had an otherwise happy home disrupted because of suspicion and doubt which were sown by the quack. The wife, for instance, may be warned of her husband's faithlessness, although the husband's behavior is exemplary.

Many newspapers have utilized the prevailing popularity of astrology by running a daily horoscope column. Doubtless I shall receive several indignant letters of protest from fortune tellers because of today's expose, for I usually do.

The editor of the Pittsburgh Press considerately forwarded a long letter he had received from a local fortune teller taking me to task for my attack some months ago on such bootleg psychology.

If editors try to cancel a horoscope column, however, they are deluged with red hot letters of indignation, with telegrams and phone calls. The followers of fortune telling are rabid!

Barnum Was Right

Strange to say, statesmen and professional men, college professors and bankers, are taken in by the glib pronouncements of crystal gazers and other fortune tellers.

These quacks cannot predict the stock market for themselves, but they gladly do it for others. They can't even discern whether one of their customers is an ordinary citizen or a plain clothes detective. But otherwise intelligent Americans will let their lives be directed by such charlatans!

The scientific psychological laboratories here and abroad have repeatedly disproved all these forms of quackery, just as the late Houdini showed up the spiritualists. Then why do people still believe them?

Because many adults retain their childlike desire to lean on somebody else to do their thinking and tell them what to do. Like youngsters, they still must have a "mamma" to look after them and do their planning.

(Dr. Crane will give personal attention to questions on psychological problems. Write him in care of this newspaper, inclosing a 3-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply. Letters and readers' names are never published.)

American Women Indict Men as Not Being Romantic Enough

BY DOROTHY DIX

In a nation-wide survey on "What Do the Women of America Think About American Men," the women bring the following indictments against their fellow citizens of the male persuasion. They claim (1) that American men are not romantic enough. (2) They are more interested in business and sports than in women. (3) They are set-ups for flattery. (4) They can't be trusted to make important decisions in the home. (5) They underestimate their wives' abilities. (6) They have many things wrong with their personal appearance, but their most common flaw is whiskers. They need a shave. (7) They should be more prompt to help their wives with the baby.

DOROTHY DIX

Well, of all the hooey I ever encountered, this is the worst. Surely the women who answered that questionnaire must have done so with their tongues in their cheeks, but, if they didn't, it is a grand certificate of character for the American man. If all that is the matter with him is the lack of a shave and being a trifle shy on romance, he certainly rates A-1 among the masculine inhabitants of the world.

American women never make me so tired as when they talk about American men's lack of romance. What do they mean about romance, anyway? Playing guitars under windows? Quoting poetry and making impassioned love speeches? Indulging in perpetual petting parties and long-drawn-out kisses? Those things have no part in everyday living. They belong to the movies, to novels, to youth and moonlight nights, and no man in the world keeps up being romantic after he is 30, or married.

But no other man is really as romantic as the American man. No other man puts woman on such a pedestal as he does. No other man marries so exclusively for love as he does. No other man wraps so many pink chiffons of ideals about women as he does. Why, a woman can get away with murder if she is only passably young and pretty and looks a bit sorry.

And another thing about American women that makes me want to get up and scream is their always complaining about American men being so much interested in business. They seem to have a contempt for that, and are always talking disparagingly about the old office. But I have never yet seen a wife who didn't want the money her husband made. Also, they seem to forget that men must have something to fill in their time and divert them, and it is a lot better for them to be chasing the lady on the dollar than it is a platinum blonde.

Maybe American men are a set-up for flattery, but that is a tip and not a criticism, and women should thank their lucky stars that they can work men applying judiciously a little soft soap. But as far as being amenable to flattery is concerned, aren't we all?

Maybe American men can't be trusted to make important decisions in the home. Nobody knows for certain, though, because they never have a chance to try it. The womanfolk boss the ranch and all husband has to do is to pay the bills.

It seems probable that a man who can run a big steel corporation or command an army or discover a new germ would have sense enough and executive ability enough to decide on what color to paint the living-room ceiling, how to make the children behave, and what to do for the baby when it had the colic.

As to American men's appearance, perhaps they are not models of what the well-dressed man wears at all times and seasons, but it has been a long time since most of us have seen anybody from the whiskers belt. Don't forget we invented the electric razor. And use it.

Go to. If American women found these things the chief faults that American men have, they prove that women have a sense of humor in spite of the belief to the contrary.

Dear Dorothy Dix—What am I to do with a man who says that he can't go on with his business, home and friends if I give him up? He is a married man and manager of the office in which I am employed. He tells me that he has never loved before or cared for any one as much as he does for me, and that he wouldn't hurt me or get me into trouble for the world. He doesn't do a thing all day but hang around me and attempt to talk to me and beg me to love him as he loves me. Please tell me what to do?

ALWAYS BLUE.

Answer:

Get away, my child, while the going is good. Don't stay on in the danger zone because you don't want to give up your job. You will lose that as soon as the office scandal gets known, and then you won't even have a recommendation to take away with you.

Don't listen to the man who tells you that he can't go on without you and that he will go to the devil if you give him up. That is one of the oldest and most effective lines of the seducer. And it is the lowest and the meanest because it appeals to the mother instinct to protect and save the weakling, who hangs on to her skirts and makes her feel responsible for him. No woman can save that kind of a man. No woman can furnish a backbone for a spineless man. No woman can put energy into a lazy one. Every man has to save himself or else be lost. And, anyway, you were not designed to be a prop.

And don't believe in the promise of the big bad wolf that he won't hurt you. No married man can have an affair with a girl without wrecking her reputation.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Is it possible for a man to be jealous of a woman without being in love with her? I go about with a man who is not in love with me, but is so jealous of me that he forbids me to go out even with other girls. JESSE.

Answer:

Many men are so monopolistic that it makes them green-eyed for any woman they deign to notice to go out with any one else. They are dogs in the manger who don't want to marry the girls themselves, but do not want them to marry any other man. Have nothing to do with that kind of man.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

First of all, it isn't the vogue this year to tan a deep shade. With the very feminine style and the soft muted colors of the Spring and Summer fashion palette, a deep tan is not attractive. We females are turning into fragile softies—whether we like it or not. And if you are at all interested in keeping step with the times you will see to it that you take the sun (by all means) but you will take it gradually and so well protected that your skin will be a glowing healthy color rather than bean-pot brown.

Here are ten sensible suggestions for taking Old Sol as you should if you desire to preserve your ladylike beauty:

1—For at least one month before you sun bathe, condition the skin with frequent annointments of warm oil—olive, mineral or a prepared body lotion.

2—Apply oil or ointment to your hair with steaming towels once a week and get in plenty of brushing and scalp massage. This recondi-tions neglected hair and the natural oils combats the sun's heat.

3—Begin to sun bathe in ten minute periods. Each day increase the time a minute or two but never be exposed longer than one-half hour to the turn! If you want more sun cover yourself with a white sheet or robe.

4—Unless your skin is naturally well lubricated, you must use an oily preparation on it. Mineral oil with a few drops of iodine is an inexpensive and efficacious combination. Cover all skin to be exposed.

5—While in the sun keep your hair covered with a porous turban, a light scarf or other covering. Sun streaks hair, fades it beyound correction, and makes it dry. Even the youngest of heads cannot take sun in strong doses.

6—While sun basking turn frequently, taking care that the inside of your arms and legs, the under part of your chin and the back of your neck get the same dose of sun as the rest of your body.

7—Always protect your eyes either with dark glasses or with eye pads—cotton soaked in a mild astringent such as witch hazel. Keep the pads dampened.

8—When the day is very hot, be sensible, and do not lie in the sun. Many girls have suffered for years from a sun fever which they invited through carelessness.

9—Do not bathe in warm or hot water for at least one hour after a sun bath. A cold shower should never be taken directly after a sun bath. If you have burned even the slightest bit, sit wrapped in towels wrung out of chilled water for at least one-half hour.

10—If you wear no stockings you may keep your skin nicely lubricated with a body lotion between sun baths. This helps to keep the skin texture attractive and the color subdued to a becoming tone.

An occasional egg facial during the summer will help your beauty. Send for Patricia Lindsay's home recipes and enclose a self-addressed envelope bearing a three-cent stamp.

Be A Careful Driver

The Home Gardener

By Edwin H. Perkins

Garden planning time is here. In a short time seeds or plants can be set in the ground, so give some thought to design. In a general way, garden design can be classified as formal or informal. The formal garden is planned along the lines of symmetrical balance. It makes use of a circular, square or rectangular pattern, or any deviation of them as a basis, and unifies the design with a central feature such as a fountain, bird bath, sun dial or larger fixture. All lines are hard and sharp.

Undulating curves are used in the informal arrangement, and balance is obtained through the use of irregular massing of foliage. For the owner of a small garden, who lacks time to give to management, the informal arrangement is easier. Many of the accessories used in the formal garden can be used acceptably in this arrangement. Both types have beauty which is created not by arrangement of design alone but by the appropriate selection and pleasing association of harmonizing plants.

Color, form and texture should be the dominant features in any garden and of these color is the most appreciated. Color can be obtained through planting suitable annual, biennial or perennial plants.

Setting a Scale for Child's Punishment Is Great Mistake

BY ANGELO PATRI

Katy is six. Her mother was never taught about the nature of children. She knows only what she experienced, and she was brought up by a hard aunt who had children of her own and obliged to earn a living for all of the brood. Her aunt's method of discipline was a short cut to peace. "You do this and I'll do that to you." Now that Katy has to be reared her mother follows the old pattern. Maybe she gets a certain satisfaction out of it for the days she suffered under the harsh rule of eye for eye.

"Did you spill that water? Go get a rag. Wipe it up. Now come here and get your smacks. Three smacks for spilling water. Now you sit on that chair until dinner time."

"O, you forgot to shut the door, did you? Well. I'll give you something to help your memory. Five strokes with the switch will help you to remember that doors have hinges."

Now Katy has become a thorn in her mother's flesh. She thinks up things to do that provoke her mother—the more destructive the better—and she does not mind the smacks and the switches beyond the minute. Punishment has become a game between her and hr mother. But mother has wearied of it and wants a way out. She says Katy is bad, plain bad. No child would torment its own mother as she does if she weren't plain bad. She forgets that she started the game and enjoyed it until it began going against her.

There is always the danger of this sort when discipline becomes tit for tat. Making of rules is the making of trouble always. It is a great mistake to lay down a rule and set a punishment because the conditions of the act are never twice the same. That means the punishment does not fit. Better treat each emergency as it rises. Better be free of rules and regulations regarding a child's behavior so that one is free to act with what wisdom one can muster.

Household rules should be general. It is better to hold that good manners are a family characteristic, something expected of everyone, than to set the rule: "Any child who interrupts another person when he is talking has to be silenced for the half day and stay in his room one hour." The interruption might be necessary, or it might be excusable. Leave room for interpretation of the situation always. And don't tempt children to dramatic infringements of ordinary discipline by fixing penalties.

The same principle holds in school management. It is a mistake to announce laws and penalties. "Any pupil found writing on the walls," etc., is a direct invitation to the pupil who loves nothing better than a contest with the authorities. All he needs is a suggestion and he starts to work. Then precious time and energy are wasted on hunting him. And if he is found, what of it? Better take cleanliness and the care of the building for granted and attend to any offense against them when it comes.

Punishment is necessary ONLY when it helps the offender to a better understanding of himself and other people. Severity is useless.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

THE CHARACTERS

Peter Mallone: Adventurous journalist.

Petronella: His courageous sister.

Tony Lance: British agent, the man Petrel loves.

Yesterday: Petrel rescues the papers, but her love for Tony is dead.

Chapter 32

'I've Had Enough!'

"MY wound is not serious. Hassan is badly injured. He is in that car." Her voice sounded hard, cutting, small. There were sobs ready to rise and choke it, unless she controlled herself rigidly.

"What happened?" asked Tony.

Petrel related the occurrences, as though she were submitting a report.

"We drove without lights until we saw the plane in the moonlight. We had expected it to be guarded by police, with camels and lanterns instead we thought we saw figures moving. There were no lights. I told Hassan to turn on his headlights, and make a circuit, to distract the unknown men so that I could search near the plane. I jumped off the step of the car. The two men ran after the car, and shot Hassan. When I reached the plane, I found one guard gagged and tied up. The other was murdered. I took his rifle. Fired it, to get them back. Ran to the car and managed to get away. They fired at us as we drove off. That is all."

"All!" muttered Michael, gripping her tighter. Petronella turned her head.

"Will you go to the car and wait for me? I want to speak to Tony alone for a minute. Then I want you to take me back to the hotel."

"All right." He looked strangely at them, and obeyed.

She waited for a moment. The sergeant followed, as his men carried Hassan to one of the police cars.

She was alone with Tony. She faced him.

"Here are the papers you would have risked Peter's life to get, Tony," she flashed. "Luckily my right wrist wasn't broken, so I could fire a rifle and drive a car. Hassan is dead, or wounded. But for some reason or other, I'm still alive. But I've had enough, Tony. Thank God I shall never know what lies you would have used to explain it to me, if Peter had gone out there and been killed, as the guard was killed!"

He stepped close to her. "Petrel, you're hysterical. You don't know what you're saying. You don't understand. How was I to know the papers were out there, in the sand, hidden? When he heard that, Peter would have phoned me, and gone with an escort."

She laughed in hard, bitter disbelief. "Peter! Peter, wait! He'd have gone as I did, alone. Well, Peter didn't go. I don't believe you'd have cared if he had," she raged coldly. "You'd thought of the possibility, but you didn't care." Perhaps she was hysterical, as he had told her. Her nerves had gone. She must get away from Tony, from this hateful scene, from everything.

"It was only when you discovered that I had gone instead, that you were afraid of a scandal. Because you can't let a girl get killed, without people asking awkward questions. If you hadn't discovered that, you weren't coming, yourself. You were going to wait for the papers in the room at the 'Continental.' Here they are—take them! They have cost two lives, perhaps three!"

'Lucky to be Alive'

Flinging them on to the ground at his feet, she turned. She went to the car, and climbed in through the door Michael held open for her.

"Take me away quickly, Mike," she whispered.

Tony was at the door. "Wait a minute. She has got to listen. Petrel, you've got it all wrong. Peter will confirm that. You have got to believe two things. That I had no idea Peter was really injured. He forgets to mention things like that, when he is keen to be given a job."

"Yes, I'll believe that," Petronella answered stonily.

"Secondly, that I acted quickly, without realizing the possibility that the dispatch might still be in the plane, and Peter, being crazy, might go straight after it. I can never forgive myself for that. Unhappily, the rest is true. Papers like these do cost lives. It is a fact. I can't deny it. You did an amazing job. But it was right that you should hate it. You are lucky to be alive."

"I don't feel lucky."

"You are hating me, now. But it is my job you hate, Petrel. When you realize that the things you said were unjust, and bitter, remember that. Think it over."

Petronella met his eyes. Her mind only half grasped what he had said. But the chief thought uppermost in her mind was that she did not want to believe, or trust him.

"Peter wouldn't have waited for an escort," she repeated. "He would have been dead. He is alive. You've got your papers. That is all you

I LIKE THE MOVIES

Dear Mrs. Post: As one of your admiring readers, I must say that I am very surprised by your remarks in the interview with you in the current Photoplay. It does not sound like you to be smug or superior. Can it possibly be that you never go to the movies except to see one of the three actresses or four actors you have named? In addition to these you say you like Ronald Colman sometimes, and Herbert Marshall's voice. Does this mean that you listen to the latter only over the radio? It is really very hard for me to think of you as the person you seem to be in this article, and I am hoping you can send me an explanation.

Answer: I am more than glad to answer this letter because it may be that this same impression—certainly not intended either by me or by my interviewer—has been given to others of my readers. It is true that I do particularly like the actresses and actors named, but I couldn't begin to count all the others for whom I have quite as great a liking and go to see regularly. I must have jumbled my words to have given the impression that I liked Ronald Colman only sometimes and liked Herbert Marshall only for his voice. I have always thought the latter a charming actor and I have never seen Ronald Colman when I thought him less than perfect in his part.

BROKEN ENGAGEMENT

Dear Mrs. Post: A few weeks ago a friend of mine broke his engagement, and after waiting a week or so he had to ask to have his ring returned. The girl sent it back with his picture. Now this man feels that she should also return other presents that he has given her, such as a traveling clock, expensive books, jewelry, luggage and so on. They were engaged several years and naturally during that time he gave her many presents. I disagree with him on all counts except the ring, and I gather that he has become embittered by this unfortunate experience he is losing his good sense.

Answer: All articles that he gave to her and intended as furnishing for their house, as well as any important jewelry, should be returned to him now. By "important" I mean expensive jewelry that a girl should not accept from a man who is not her fiance. Objects of small value even though "real", as well as the conspicuous bracelets and clips and pins that are commonly known as costume jewelry, need not be returned. Nor should she be expected to send back any of the other presents that had no lasting value.

NECK CHANGES

BY ANNE ADAMS

Girls, it's smart to look as sweet as a story-book heroine this spring . . . and here's an entirely new Princess Dress to prove it. Behold—there are three different pieces of "lingerie" neckwear to change the look of Pattern 4079. Loyola, Bradley in Tourney Play Tonight

New York —(AP)— Two of the strongest mid-western basketball teams step into the New York Basketball Writers' national invitation tournament tonight.

Bradley Tech of Peoria, Ill., and Loyola of Chicago, which drew Byes through the first round of the six-team event, take on a pair of metropolitan rivals which won the opening matches. Bradley faced unbeaten Long Island University while Loyola, also undefeated this season, plays St. John's of Brooklyn. The winner will meet in the final game Wednesday night while the losers will play off for third place.

MAYOR GETS INSTRUCTIONS BEFORE OPENING ELKS PIN MEET

The 27th annual state Elks bowling tournament opened officially Saturday afternoon when ten booster teams took the drives. The opening ceremonies saw Mayor John Goodland, Jr., toss the first ball as he led a team of city officials into battle. To help the mayor turn in a top score, Lu Powers, Appleton, secretary of the tournament, offered his honor a little instruction as shown above. Other members of the city team took advantage of the instruction and gathered around. The picture shows, left to right, Chief George T. Prim, Mayor John Goodland, Jr., Carl Becker, Lu Powers, Chief George T. McGillan and C. O. Baetz. (Post-Crescent Photo)

St. Louis Browns Again Leading in Grapefruit League

Giants Undefeated in Five Starts; Have Scored 53 Runs

BY JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK —(AP)— It's the same old Grapefruit league they have down in the citrus belt, folks.

You can tell by the fact St. Louis Browns, last year's champions, are setting the pace. After the 16 major league clubs have played 56 exhibition games the Browns are on top with six victories and no defeats.

There were three other undefeated clubs—the New York Giants with five victories, the Chicago Cubs with three and the Washington Senators with two.

Fred Haney, new manager of the St. Louis American leaguers, wasn't interested in getting such a fast start because he sensed an ominous connection between the Browns finishing first in the 1938 Grapefruit grind and seventh in the American league. But playing the Philadelphia Phils every day, he has no choice and was resigned to wishing he could keep on playing them all summer.

The Giants, who were bartering for power during the winter, have scored 53 runs in their five games and Manager Bill Terry is so wreathed in smiles the baseball writers hardly recognize him.

The first 10 days of the exhibition season produced some showy baseball, including a half dozen extra-inning sessions, five shutouts and one no-hit extravaganza.

The no-hit job was the contribution of Whitey Moore and rookie Gene Thompson of the Cincinnati Reds. (Johnny Vander Meer was in bed ill and couldn't handle the chore.) The Brooklyn Dodgers, always clumsy, nearly messed up the script when Pete Coscarart doubled, but he forgot to touch first and everything was all right.

There have been many excellent pitching performances. Bob Feller, the Cleveland Indians' speedster, made his first start yesterday and was credited with a victory over the Athletics. He gave one hit in three innings. The Athletics, in fact, got only two hits in the entire game.

Oh, yes, the New York Yankees have won four games and lost four.

New Duos Lead at Womens Pin Meet

Marinette — (AP) — New doubles leaders appeared in both A and B classes in the Wisconsin Women's Bowling association tournament yesterday.

F. Stephenson and R. Ross of Escanaba, Mich., took the lead in Class A with 1,029 M. and T. Centern of Green Bay rolled 1,036 for first in Class B

Other top scores of the day included: Class B team, Monarch Rangers, Beaver Dam, 2,268; Class C team, M. and M. Merchants, Milwaukee, 1,918; Class A singles, I. Klann, Milwaukee, 563; Class B singles B. Hall, Eagle River, 490.

The La Crescent (Chevrolets) of La Crosse still lead Class A team event with 2,276, followed by the Franklin Gardens, Janesville, with 2,248. The Hotel Nelsons, Racine, lead Class B with 2,281, with the Yates American team of Beloit next with 2,215.

The Class A singles leader is E. Dwyer, Green Bay, with 569, followed by A. Wittinger, La Crosse, 557. Class B. Singles leader is A. Moran, Janesville, 514, with G. Lasen of Green Bay, 508, next.

Chaffin Chatter

By Gordon R. McIntyre

THE WISCONSIN STATE BASEBALL LEAGUE, a Class D circuit, took another step toward organization here Sunday afternoon but it wasn't as firm and as long a step as a good many persons wished.

The $30 franchise check was received from Sheboygan and Art Grau of Racine. Appleton's check is forthcoming by Wednesday as are reports or checks from Fond du Lac, Merrill, and Wisconsin Rapids. There also is possibility of several other cities including Kaukauna and Madison coming into the circuit.

It was tentatively agreed that a 120-game schedule be played, that the season open on May 14 and close Labor day, that there be a split season, a 15-player limit and a $1,000 monthly salary limit. It also was agreed that April 24 would be the spring training date and a schedule committee of Otto Kaufman, Sheboygan, Art Grau, Racine, and the writer, was named. The next league meeting will be Sunday at Fond du Lac or Sheboygan—if one is to be held.

From a personal standpoint we thought the meeting was a flop, or almost. Here it was the middle of March and to all indications nothing much has been accomplished in at least three months.

Kaufman has lately been made representative of Joe Carr, promotional director of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues, and has been working his head off on the matter. It seems, however, that his efforts are a bit late, and that when he's around the various cities are interested and when he's gone the interest wanes or someone loses heart.

Art Grau, Racine, attending the meeting the first time, came expecting the setup was complete and he could return home with a schedule and something definite to set before the Racine group controlling Horlick field. He was rather disappointed and can't offer a thing at a meeting tonight with Racine officials.

The Appleton situation is somewhat similar. Since last November or December nothing has been done to keep interest going, probably because too much has been taken for granted. Even at yesterday's meeting there was no one present who wasn't there because of reasons other than immediate organization of a team. In other words we were there as a sports writer and Alderman Kubitz because of general interest.

Kaukauna was reported interested but no one attended the meeting. The Kaws want a tie-up with some major or Class AA team and Joe Carr was contacted yesterday but again, there's nothing definite about the setup.

Fond du Lac, Wisconsin Rapids and Merrill weren't in attendance, either, and that doesn't indicate intense interest. Grau was for putting a little less effort into getting some of the small towns and getting into Madison and Green Bay. If the present baseball powers in the two cities aren't interested, find someone who is—that was his position.

At the moment there are meetings scheduled in Fond du Lac Tuesday night, Wisconsin Rapids Tuesday night and Madison Wednesday, to get final reports on the cities. Kaukauna is supposed to be having a meeting, too, sometime during the week, and there'll probably be one in Appleton.

In other words, the next three days should tell the story, definitely.

Pie Traynor Needs Hurlers To Balance Pirate Squad

BY ROBERT MYERS

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates, having a little difficulty breaking into the win column in exhibition games, came back to their training site today to meet the Chicago White Sox.

Harold J. (Pie) Traynor, manager of the Pirates, wasn't too concerned about these setbacks, but he admittedly will spend sleepless nights until he can plug up the main weakness of his club—pitching department.

Traynor divulged he has lines out to beg, buy or otherwise appropriate a couple of pitchers, but until deals of this kind go through, he is rather pessimistic about Pirates chances in the National league this season.

There were two notable absentees from the 1938 ranks, and it was on the shoulders of these two, as much as anything else, that Traynor placed the blame for the fold up of Pittsburgh in the closing stages of last year's fight with Chicago's Cubs. Paul (Big Poison) Waner apparently was lost from right field, and Al Todd was gone from the catching job.

Traynor vows he won't miss either one, and goes farther than that. He gave strong intimation he was glad they were gone—Waner as a hold-out, Todd traded to Boston in exchange for Catcher Ray Mueller.

In Waner's place he has Heinie Manush and Fern Bell. Bell, who hit .327 with Louisville last year, lost the game against the Cubs in Los Angeles yesterday when he let Ripper Collins' liner go through him, but he's a better fielder than that would indicate; better, doubtless, than the aging Waner, who contributed several highly important bobbles last year.

Lloyd (Little Poison) Waner remains in center, and the left field berth is taken care of by hard hitting John Rizzo, who batted .301 in his first year in the majors last season, including 24 homers.

Traynor has no squawk with his infield of Gus Suhr at first, Pep Young at second, Lee Handley at third and slugging Arky Vaughn at short. Bill Brubaker will be on hand for utility service.

Mueller will be the regular catcher, backed up by Ray Berres and a rookie, George Susce.

As things stand now, he rates Russ Bauers and Jim Tobin as "the only two pitchers I've got," which wasn't very complimentary to the rest of the staff.

OSHKOSH high school made steady progress in its campaign to dethrone Appleton as all-time leader of the Fox River Valley conference basketball parade during the past season, but the Terrors still maintain a substantial margin over the field, statistics of the Valley Sportswriters association reveal.

Oshkosh was one of five conference teams which improved their ratings, covering 17 seasons, in 1939. The others were Manitowoc, Green Bay East, Green Bay West and Sheboygan Central. Appleton and Fond du Lac moved downward, and Sheboygan North appeared in the tabulation for the first time.

Pass 100 Mak

Oshkosh and Manitowoc passed the century mark in total victories during the season, and East reached a spot from which it will threaten the 100 mark next year. On the other side of the picture, Fond du Lac and Central became the first Valley schools to pass 100 in total defeats.

Appleton's all-time record is so high that the Terrors must hit a terrific annual pace to maintain their percentage. In winning eight and losing six during the past season, they saw their mark drop from .710 to .631, but they boosted their total victories to 123, a new high point.

Oshkosh, winning 12 of 14 games, pushed its average from .611 to .631, and if it holds the pace, may seriously menace Appleton's leadership within two or three seasons.

Stays In Third

Manitowoc remained in third place, winning nine while losing five of its 1939 games. The Lincoln average stayed almost static, but did edge upward a trifle, from .566 to .567.

East high kept pace with Manitowoc, and remains in fourth place on the big list. The Red Devils won nine games and lost five, their percentage advancing from .534 to .542.

West stepped closer to the .500 mark, with eight wins in 14 games, and the Wildcat 171-season mark moved from .432 to .443.

Fond du Lac, winning only three of 14 games, sagged from .431 to .413, but Central, which has had indifferent luck in recent seasons, reversed its field, winning six games while losing eight, and moving its percentage from .384 to .391.

Sheboygan North made an inauspicious debut, capturing but one victory during the schedule, and starting its Valley conference athletic program with an average of .071.

Appleton and Oshkosh now are tied in total championships, each having six. The Indians have three titles in a row to their credit. Manitowoc has taken the crown four times, East and Fond du Lac three apiece, West twice and Sheboygan Central once.

Rockets Enter State Tournament by Tipping Two Rivers

SEYMOUR LOSES

Bows to Denmark in Class C Game; Score Is 33 to 19

BY BILL DOWLING

KAUKAUNA—It took the Red Rockets of Neenah a quarter to warm up against Two Rivers in the regional Class B final here Saturday night but a second period spurt put them in the lead 13 to 2 at halftime and enabled them to coast to a 39 to 21 win. In the Class C final a rangy Denmark five ran over Seymour's Indians, 33 to 19.

Twenty-eight fouls were called in the Neenah game to put the ball in the hands of the officials most of the time, with frequent substitutions also slowing up the game. The Rockets made 13 of 22 attempts from the foul line, with their opponents converting on 7 of 14.

Harlan Hesselman, Rocket guard, paced the scorers with 12 points on four baskets and four gift shots. Captain Dan Schmidt at center followed with 10, and Warren Kettering, who with Hesselman started at guard, was third with 7. Perry led the losers with 8.

Neenah failed to make a basket in the first period. Kriesa succeeded from the corner to put Two Rivers ahead with a minute gone, but a free throw by B. Kettering and a pair by Schmidt put the Rockets in front 3 to 2 at the quarter.

Count 13 Points

The winners rattled off 13 more points before Two Rivers could score. B. Kettering pivoted from the free throw line for Neenah's first bucket and his brother Warren connected from close in. Peterson's hook swished through, and the sub forward followed with a brace of charity tosses. As the first half closed Hesselman dribbled in for a bucket in the last second to put his team ahead 13 to 2.

Hesselman took up where he left off as the third canto began, spearing a one-hander from the free throw. Two Rivers came suddenly to life, with Perry tossing in a gift shot and Kriesa making his second basket, a hook from the corner. W. Kettering's free throw and Peterson's rebound gave the Rockets a 19 to 5 margin. Perry dropped in both efforts when fouled by Schmidt, but the Neenah captain made up for his misdemeanor by sinking a rebound and converting on two chances when fouled by Kriesa. Hesselman looped one from the free throw line, was fouled, and added another point for a 26 to 9 margin. Short shots by Hesselman and W. Kettering and Perry's free throw for the losers made it 30 to 10 as the third quarter ended.

Perry's short try was good but Schmidt kept Neenah's margin by tipping in a rebound. Kopetsky snared one from far out, and again Neenah came back as W. Kettering stole the leather near mid-floor and soloed in for a bucket.

Lead 35 to 15

Shedivy converted when fouled and Two Rivers had 15. The first of Hesselman's two gift shots gave the Rockets a 20-point lead at 35 to 15, with five minutes to go. Hackstock's one-pointer made it 37 before Wondrash got his only point of the contest to bring Two Rivers to 16. Schmidt and Kopetsky matched baskets and the Rockets led 39 to 18. Coach Ole Jorgenson sent his reserves in for the last minute, with Shedivy's free throw and Perry's bucket winding up the scoring.

The Class C battle see-sawed the first half with the count 12-11 for Denmark as the teams went to the dressing rooms. A third quarter spurt put the Danes in front 21 to 13. Dallas Dimmer again made five baskets for the winners, repeating his record against Marion in the first round game, while Huettl, long-shooting Seymour guard, swished through three for the losers.

Rasmussen's short bucket was matched by Denny for the Indians, with Foates' free throw putting the Indians ahead. Dimmer dribbled in to give the Danes the lead at 4 to 3, and Schleis increased the margin with a gift shot. Pasch countered from the foul line for Seymour but Schleis hooked one in for Denmark and the Danes led 7 to 4 at the quarter.

Seymour Leads

Zuiches connected from the corner and made his free throw when fouled, with Seymour taking the lead for the last time as Denny snared a long pass to count on a sleeper. Larsen caged one from close in to make it 9-all, with Christensen's charity shot and Dimmer's rebound for Denmark and Huettl's long fling for Seymour bringing it to 12 and 11 at halftime.

Dimmer was good on a set shot and added another point when fouled. Huettl again connected from far out, but the Danes then piled on seven points to lead at 22 to 13. Krzwanek getting two buckets and Schleis a basket and free throw.

Pasch and Krzwanek matched shots from the free throw line, and Huettl and Schleis from far out to bring the count to 26-17. The Danes ran up to 33 with Rasmussen caging a free throw and Dimmer making two baskets and Schleis one. With Denmark's second string in the game Zuiches potted one for the final score.

N.B.A. Again Picks Tony Galento as No. 1 Challenger

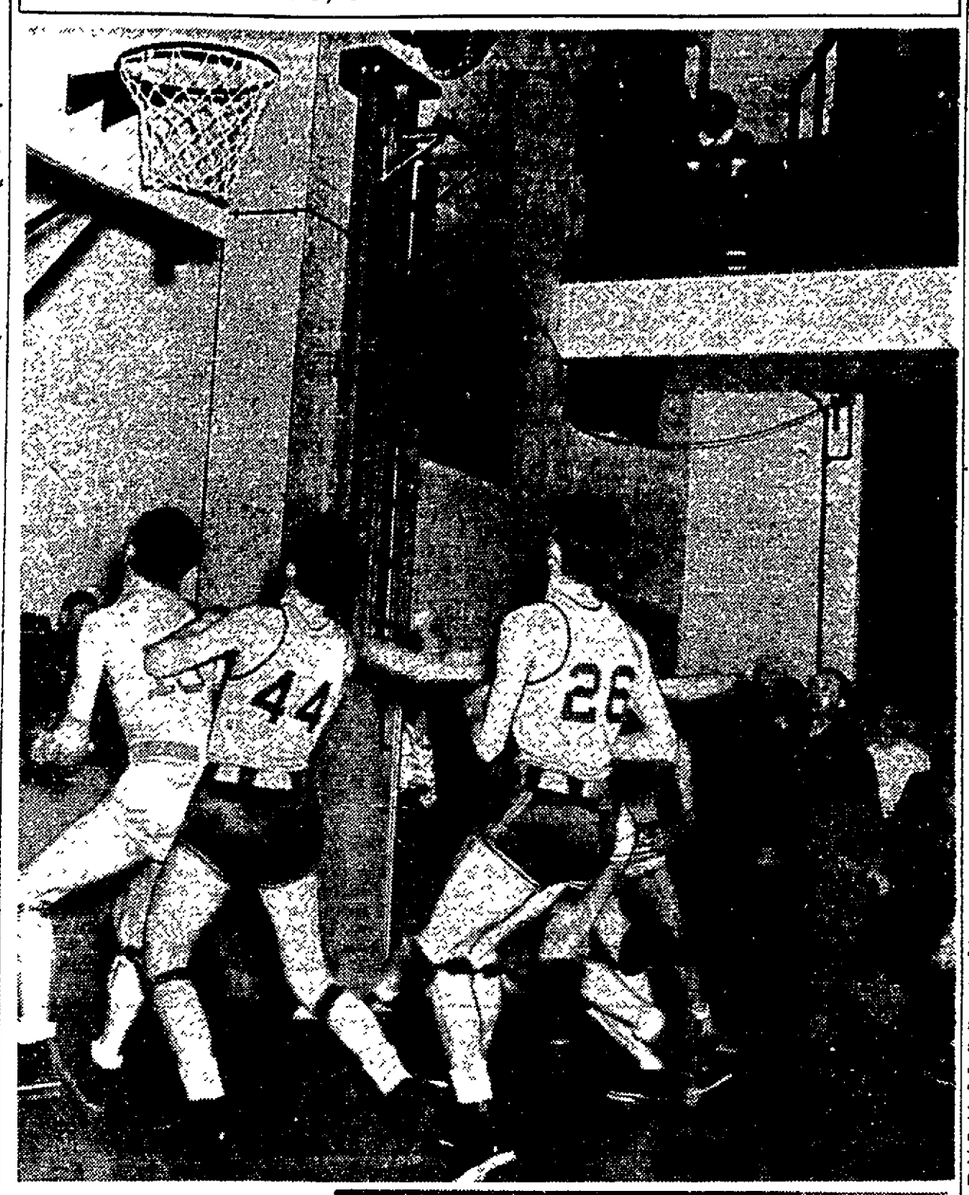

Washington —(AP)— The National Boxing association again named Tony Galento the No. 1 challenger to the heavyweight boxing title.

The association's rating committee filed a notation, however, saying it neither sponsored Galento nor conceded him much chance of toppling Joe Louis' title crown. Committeeman Joe Triner of Illinois voted to leave the No. 1 position vacant.

Bob Pastor, suspended by the committee at its last quarterly sitting, was rated No. 2 contender when officials learned the New Jersey boxing commission had restored him to good standing.

Others in the first 10 heavyweights, in order of their ranking, were Lou Nova, Max Baer, Red Burman, Maurice Strickland, Nathan Mann, Roscoe Toles, Johnny Paycheck and Tony Musto.

NEENAH WINS, SEYMOUR LOSES AT CAGE TOURNEY

Here are two pictures from the Kaukauna regional basketball finals Saturday night when Neenah won Class B and Denmark Class C honors and the right to compete in state play this week. In the upper picture Neenah and Two Rivers are battling and the shot was taken under the Neenah hoop as the boys watched for a rebound. The game was in the first quarter at that stage and neither club was doing much scoring. Dan Schmidt, Neenah, has the inside position on the play with Kreisa, No. 44, Two Rivers, behind him and using a bit of elbow. Antonie, Two Rivers, is No. 26. The referee is Werner Witte of Appleton.

The picture at the right is of Coach Paul Lofthus of Seymour and he isn't praying. It was taken in the last period of Seymour's game with Denmark when Paul was playing harder than his boys. He had just slid off the bench and was giving a few directions although, with one hand pointing one way and the other hand the other way, it's hard to figure out what he might have meant. The very calm individual bending over the scorebook—and jotting down Denmark baskets—is "Smiley" Nickodem of Seymour. (Post-Crescent Photos.)

score. The Appleton five turned back Port Washington in a close game, 30 to 25, Saturday night. The winners held a 20 to 6 advantage at half time.

Kimberly ran up a 33 to 12 lead at the halfway mark and scored a 44 to 33 win over Milton to enter the finals Sunday afternoon. The Papermakers came from behind in the closing minutes to eliminate Walt's Bungalows of Beloit by a 32 to 26 score in one of the best games of the tournament Saturday night. Kimberly trailed, 18 to 15, at the half but made eight points in the final minute of play for a victory.

Wonser Is Star

Grishaber gave Elm Trees an edge in the final minutes of the skirmish with Kimberly when he potted a bucket and a free throw. Orville Wonser played an outstanding game when he caged ten points on five buckets and held Joe Gossens to four points. Burton bottled up Swen Bowman while Zimmerman entered the game in the fourth quarter and supplied a victory spark by plunking three successive baskets.

Kimberly peppered the hoop from all angles in the closing minutes of the game in a desperate angle to close a narrow gap but the ball bounded off the rim time and again. Hofkins, veteran guard, was the outstanding man on the floor. His ball handling and rebound work highlighted the game while Bowman, LeMay and Chub VanderVelden kept the team in the running.

Milk and Its Products

I—LEADING BREEDS OF MILK COWS

An island in the English Channel is noted for several things. It is called Jersey, and it gave us the name of the woolen jacket known as a "jersey."

Jersey has an area of 45 square miles, and a population of about 50,000. It belongs to Great Britain, but it is closer to the coast of France than to England.

A champion Jersey cow.

Jersey potatoes are famous, and so are Jersey cabbages, but most famous of all are Jersey cows. They rank among the best of the world's milk cows.

More than a century ago, people of other lands sent traders to Jersey to buy some of the cattle which had been bred on the island. Today there are Jersey cows in many countries. Their milk is extremely rich in "butter fat;" in other words, it has a great deal of cream, and the cream can be turned into butter.

Another fine breed is the Guernsey, named after a different island in the British Channel. It is a relative of the Jersey, but is a little larger. Like the Jersey, the Guernsey supplies rich, yellow, creamy milk.

Many Jersey and Guernsey cows have produced their own weight in butter in a year. In other words, the cream in their milk, when turned into butter, made as many pounds as the cows weighed.

There are more than 25,000,000 milk cows in the United States and Canada. The average is close to one cow for each family of five persons. These cows give enough milk to supply every man, woman and child with just about 100 gallons of milk.

In actual fact, we receive a great deal of our milk in other forms. It comes as butter and as cheese. The baker often puts milk in bread and cake, and a great deal of milk goes into ice cream. About one-fifth of all food eaten by people of the United States and Canada is made up of milk and its products.

Jersey and Guernsey cows lead for rich milk, but the Holstein-Friesian is the champion for total amount of milk. A good Holstein-Friesian cow will give about 1,100 gallons of milk in a year, and "record cows" of this breed give much more.

Council Defers Action on Change In Zoning of Lot

Aldermen Will Wait for Recommendation From Plans Commission

Neenah—The city council delayed action on changing the northwest cornor lot on S. Commercial street and Winneconne avenue from residential to a business zone following a hearing Saturday night in the city hall.

The hearing was the result of a remonstrance opposing the change, and about 12 property owners appeared at the hearing and spoke for and against the proposal. Herman Jonijohn informed the council that a gasoline filling station would be erected on the corner, and he showed an architect's drawing of the proposed station, stating that it would cost about $3,000 and that it would be fire proof.

Anton Nielson spoke in favor of the change, pointing out that the corner lot isn't desirable for a residence because of the arterial stop sign and heavy traffic. Thomas Thompson was against the change, and he read a paper in which he expressed his reasons. He said, "I object to changing residential property into business property in a residential zone." He explained that the city has incurred considerable expense in planning its zones and shouldn't "shoot holes in it, weakening and reducing its value as well as reducing the security of the homeowner." He declared the station wouldn't be an improvement and that there was enough gas stations in that vicinity.

Argue Both Sides

Others who spoke against the change were Frank Reidhauser and Evald Jersild, while Joe Rine, Harry Haber, and Martin Wachholz were in favor of it. The latter's father owns the property, and he said that his father had been trying to sell the lot for 12 years for less than the assessed valuation.

Alderman Edward Schultz moved that the council delay action on the matter until the next meeting, and Alderman John Heigl moved that a recommendation be obtained from the plans commission in the meantime.

Following the hearing, the council limited transactions to routine matters. City Clerk H. S. Zemlock read a letter from C. J. Simpson, superintendent of the Soo Line, in which the railroad man explained that shifting of equipment to eliminate switching near the Winneconne avenue crossing would involve too much money. He pointed out that a survey showed that moving equipment to do all switching at the east end of the yard would cost about $9,850 and would require two additional tracks, an extension of a third track and erection of a yard office. He also pointed out that moving the entire yard south of Jackson street would cost about $30,000.

Some Eliminated

In his notice, Simpson also pointed out that some of the switching operations had been eliminated, having been shifted to Manitowoc and that the railroad men had been cautioned individually to eliminate excess noise and blocking of crossings.

Alderman Heigl suggested that when the company is in a financial position, the city should promote the shift of the entire yards, then Jackson street could be opened. Council members said that there have been few complaints on switching operations in that vicinity.

Mayor Edwin A. Kalfahs called an informal meeting for 7:30 Tuesday night when the aldermen will discuss the proposed changes in the plans of the swimming pool and recreation building. The committee on streets, sidewalks and bridges will meet at 6 o'clock on the same evening.

Fete Neenah Five During Program

Regional Champs Will Leave for State Tournament Tuesday Morning

Neenah — Neenah High school's basketball squad which will leave early Tuesday morning for the state tournament at Madison was feted at an assembly program this morning in the auditorium.

A large number of students as well as townspeople are expected to attend the tournament. Neenah will oppose Ladysmith in the opening game at 4 o'clock Tuesday.

It will be the seventh team Coach Ole Jorgensen has taken to the state tournament since he has been the Neenah basketball coach. He will take a full squad of 10 men, including Schmidt, Hackstock, Warren and Buxton Kettering, Hesselman, Peterson, Krueger, Muench Winkelman and Blank.

Speakers at the assembly program were the coach, C. F. Hedges, superintendent, and J. H. Holzman, principal. It was pointed out that students had to secure written permission from their parents to attend the state tournament, that tickets are 50 cents for each game and $1.25 for season tickets, the latter not being good for the final games.

Coach Jorgensen also pointed out that one of Neenah's teams in a state tournament was eliminated in the first game by a Ladysmith quintet.

Hollywood—A very strange thing has been happening in Hollywood these past few years. It started with "The Life of Louis Pasteur," and it has become increasingly evident with each new biographical picture and each new adventure film. Today it — and by "it" I mean a new trend — is in full swing. Screen biographies and outdoor thrillers are the fad with this inevitable result: the ladies, who had ruled the movies for twenty years, are being forced into a back seat; the men are coming into their own.

Fidler

Make a list of the important pictures produced in the last three years and you will find that 90 per cent of them have been "men's stories." Make a list of those proposed for the coming year and you will see that the percentage still holds good. And it will continue to do so just as long as biographical dramas are the order of the day, for history offers 10 interesting men for every outstanding woman. All of which is not meant as a reflection on the abilities of the speaker sex. The ladies, unfortunately, were "emancipated" only a generation or so ago.

The new trend means that the chances of every Hollywood actress have been curtailed. The men are getting all the plums. Even Nancy Kelly, hailed as the most promising young dramatic find of the past year, is forced to play comparative bits in pictures that spotlight the men in the cast. It's a tough break for the ladies, but they had such a long reign that they've small cause for complaint.

PERSONAL OBSERVATIONS: It's always a shock to meet Basil Rathbone off-screen—he doesn't look a day over thirty. When Bob Taylor sits alone in a cafe, he invariably pulls out pencil and paper while waiting for his order, and makes a great pretense of concentration. You'll never see Gloria Stuart without more than a dash of blue in her costume. Someone, sometime, must have played a mean trick on Pat O'Brien — he always sniffs his highball suspiciously before downing it.

When Barbara Stanwyck is dressed in slacks — and she usually is — she likes to reverse the chair, straddle it and lean her chin on its back. There's no dodging the fact — Gracie Allen, with each passing year, talks more and more like her screen self. Despite that descending voice of which his studio is so proud, Freddie Bartholomew still shrills unpleasantly when he's excited. List Fred Astaire among Hollywood's most perfectly groomed males — he always looks like he's just stepped out of a bandbox. Guess Sonja Henie can't be worried about laugh lines — when she smiles, she squints.

Grace Moore's voice, in a real temper, acquires a metallic ring. Humphrey Bogart is a "double-smoker" — releasing the smoke from his mouth, he then re-inhales it through his nostrils. It's near-sightedness that causes Joan Bennett to look anywhere but at the passers-by when she's lunching in public — if she doesn't "see" people, they can't expect her to recognize them. Add habitual doodlers: Roland Young — he's practically speechless without a pencil in his hand. Whenever a reporter steps on his set, Henry Fonda's face always assumes an "I-dare-you" expression.

Here's an extra chuckle to be cashed in when you see Lee Tracy and Peggy Shannon walk into the lion's cage in "Fixer Dugan," and start shepherding the big cats through their act. In spite of the precautions taken when that scene was shot, neither Peggy nor Lee seemed enthusiastic about it. Louis Roth, the sixty-four year old trainer, tried to restore their confidence. "No lion will ever hurt you unless you show your fear," he argued. "Just think of them as little kittens — believe you could knock them out with one blow if they get tough!" I don't think I've ever seen a funnier expression on a human face than Lee Tracy wore as he looked from Roth to the snarling lion.

Which reminds me — there was melodrama enacted the other night in the home of Robert Young. Bob was reading in the library. It was past midnight and the rest of the family was in bed. Suddenly, he heard a noise from the upper floors of the house, apparently from the attic, and immediately the thought of kidnapers flashed through his mind. A soft-voiced telephone call and, almost immediately a carload of police arrived. Guns in hand, they pussy-footed up the stairs and into the attic. And there, standing defiant in the flashlight's beam, they saw the culprit. It was the neighbor's tom-cat, out on his midnight prowl. Bob's still blushing.

Better European Demand Steadies Prices of Wheat

War Clouds Still Restrict Trade at Chicago, However

Chicago —(AP)— Evidence of improved European demand for wheat and corn, with several thousand bushels sold from domestic ports during the weekend, helped to steady the grain market today.

European war clouds restricted trade, dealers were uncertain about the outcome of the latest crisis and preferred to await developments.

Receipts were: wheat 32 cars, corn 111, oats 26.

Wheat closed ¼ off to ¼ up compared with Saturday's finish, May 68-68⅛. July 68⅛; corn ¼-½ higher, May 47⅜-⅞, July 49½-⅝; oats ¼ lower to ¼ higher.

New York —(AP)— Stocks stepped into a fast rally in the early part of today's market proceedings but stumbled on the home stretch.

Gains, running to two or more points in the morning, were chopped down substantially or replaced with declines at the close.

Nervousness over the Hitler march to the east and a possible war flare-up in Europe appeared to have waned somewhat, although it was noticed most traders were quick to cash profits on the forenoon's runup and adjourn to the side lines pending clarification of the outlook abroad.

Wall street opinion was mixed on the appoint of the SEC Chairman Douglas to the supreme court, but it was thought questionable if this development were a market motivator either way. It had been expected in most boardrooms that Douglas would get the job.

Steels, motors, aircrafts and specialties were prominent in the morning recovery jaunt. Many waveraed at the finish. Dealings slowed in the latter part of the session, with transfers approximating 900,000 shares.

Not so pleasing was the official estimate this week's steel mill operations would be off .3 of a point at 55.4 per cent of capacity. Last year at this time, however, the rate was 33.7 per cent.

Bonds exhibited selection strength but declines in this department were plentiful. Wheat at Chicago was off ¼ to ⅜ of a cent a bushed and corn ahead ¼ to ½. Cotton, in the afternoon, was up 60 to 75 cents a bale.

Foreign markets steadied after an early dip.

D-X Cagers Rally In Second Half to Take League Title

Winners of First Half Championship Defeat Brews, 42 to 38

Kaukauna—The D-X Oils, trailing 24 to 9 as the first half ended, staged a sensational second half rally yesterday afternoon to win the championship of the city basketball league, defeating the Mellow Brews, 42 to 38. The Oils, first half champs, were playing off a second half tie with the Brews.

Floyd Driessen caged two free throws as the last quarter began to put the Brews ahead at 33 to 26. Arnold for the Oils and Vanevenhoven for the Brews traded baskets to make it 35 to 28. The Oils then climbed to 32 as Koehne succeeded from the side and Arnold tipped in a rebound.

Vanevenhoven swished one through from far out and added a free throw to run the Brews to 38, but Eiting potted one from close in and Koehne rang in another and a free throw to make it 38 to 37 for the Brews. Charley Bloch's free throw tied the count on 38-all, but in the last minute Eiting sunk a bucket from the side and added another from close in to make it 42 to 38.

Arnold was the winner's high scorer with 11 points, while Floyd Driessen of the Brews had 12.

Hard-Boiled Police Cringe Before Mikes

Denver —(AP)— Installation of a two-way radio system for Denver police patrol cars brought such an epidemic of "mike fright" that a school of elocution had to be established.

"No matter how much courage some officers may have they shrink like a violet when they face the microphone," said Detective Howard Williams, radio technician. "They became unintelligible, or they shouted so loudly they nearly deafened the dispatchers at headquarters."

With a little training most officers overcame their difficulties, Williams said.

Otto M. Ludtke in the Second ward is opposed by George Proper, while Walter Kilgas, Fifth ward councilman, will defend his office against Samuel Rasmussen.

Five are out for justice of the peace, three for the north side office. Opposing Barney J. Mitchka are Emmet Rohan and William Rickard, with M. C. Connors running against Abe Goldin, south side incumbent. The only two to run for the school board are the incumbents whose terms expire, N. M. Haupt and Peter E. Van Dyke.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

wanted. These last days you talked, vaguely, always vaguely. You never meant to marry me. But now, I no longer want you. I do hate your job. And you put it first, always first. I thought I loved you, and could put up with that; and with going on leading the life I have, the last years. I thought you were worth it. But you're not. Ive had enough. You gave me some good advice. I'm going to take it. I'm going back to England tomorrow. To stay there. I've had enough!"

Tony stepped back. The expression in his eyes was strange. "I can see you have, Petrel." He spoke to Michael. "Take her home, Mike. Give her a stiff drink. Get a doctor to that shoulder. See that she sleeps. Good night, Petrel. Thank you for these. They cost a lot."

Petronella wept quietly against Mike's steady shoulder. His arm encircled her. He did not speak. At last she said:

"Will you try to book me a passage home from Port Said? If Peter is all right, I'll leave by train tomorrow."

"Why won't you believe him, Petrel?"

"Everything hangs together. He's very plausible now. But he can't cancel out that — that nightmare, Mike. No, he just didn't think it mattered letting Peter take a risk. Some men are like that. Danger is part of existence. He'd have done the same job himself, if he had thought he could succeed. But he was being followed everywhere. He always is. That is his life, Mike. And I can't face it. I couldn't be happy with him. Not now. I suppose I still love him. I can't help it. But I know that he is hard, and insensitive. I'm going to cut him out. Otherwise, Peter will be mixed up in his jobs, from now on. I know it. He admires Tony already. I want Peter to live, Mike, not die with a knife in his back." She broke down again shivering and crying. As best he could Mike comforted her.

When they reached the "Continental," Ted Masters told them, "Rene is dead."

It was true, what Tony had said. That dispatch from Moscow had cost a great deal.

'Better Off Without Me'

Tony stood beside Peter's bed in the white private ward. There was beating sunlight outside. It was afternoon.

Petronella had packed, and left by the mid-day train.

Tony spoke, "There's a very flat feeling about Cairo today." He walked to the window, and stood looking out. The bright light revealed the lines of weariness in his face.

"You've said it," agreed Peter. "I'm sorry about last night. I feel it was my fault. I ought to have guessed she was going herself, and stopped her."

"You couldn't help it. I'll never forget what it was like, though, getting your message that Masters had gone. When there he was, having a drink with me!"

"Of course I'll write and tell her you were speaking the truth. You couldn't have known Rene would bury the things. If I'd stopped to think, I should have phoned you, and taken an escort."

Tony flung round. "Don't write. I've told her. She knows. But she was right. There was still danger. There is always danger. I take it for granted. The issue seemed sufficiently important, to me, to make the job worth anyone's while. I'd no idea about your injuries. But knowing you, I might have foreseen, as she did, the way you would have acted. The thought of an escort never occurred to you, did it?"

"No."

"I'm going to let her go, without trying to justify myself. She has showed me up. What should I have felt, if you hadn't got through alive? You see? She's better without me!"

Peter groaned. "I can't stand the thought of her going off alone, like that. These last few days she has been so happy. Happier than I've ever seen her before. Now, I suppose she is feeling equally miserable. Couldn't you send her a radiogram? Just a word or two, to soften it; to suggest the break needn't be permanent?"

Tony sat on the edge of his bed. He pulled at a cotton which hung from Peter's bandaged wrist. He shook his head.

"I can't believe it would be for her good. That dispatch gives me orders for Russia; after that, Spain. And tells me there is trouble ahead. Especially in Spain. Reading that document is like looking into the future. And it isn't any better than the past. Last night, when she was nearly hysterical, it all came tumbling out—how she hates horror, suffering, trouble. Fascism and Marxism are bound to go on clashing, Peter. It is a fight which will have to be fought to a finish. I don't want to drag her into that. I wouldn't recall her, even if could."

Peter tossed restlessly. "I suppose you're right. I hope so. But this needn't prevent our being friends, Tony. Do you think they would find any sort of a niche for me in your service?" He sat up, waiting for his answer.

Tony laughed. "Your sister knows you pretty well. She said you would feel like that. But she had a horror of your getting mixed up in it. The least I can do for her is to refuse you."

"But, damn it, she isn't my nurse."

"Sorry, Peter. She also told me something else; besides being impulsive, you are not sufficiently discreet when you're drunk. And you are bad on detail. For all three reasons, I'm refusing."

Peter threw his head back on to his pillow disgustedly. "Women are better at home!" he declared.
